

Islamophobia

Islamophobia is the fear, hatred of, or prejudice against the Islamic religion or Muslims generally,^{[1][2][3]} especially when seen as a geopolitical force or the source of terrorism.^{[4][5][6]}

The term was first used in the early 20th century, emerging as a neologism in the 1970s. Its use increased during the 1980s and 1990s and reached public policy prominence with the report by the Runnymede Trust's Commission on British Muslims and Islamophobia (CBMI) entitled Islamophobia: A Challenge for Us All (1997). The introduction of the term was justified by the report's assessment that "anti-Muslim prejudice has grown so considerably and so rapidly in recent years that a new item in the vocabulary is needed".^[7] The meaning of the term continues to be debated, and some view it as problematic.

The causes and characteristics of Islamophobia are also subjects of debate. Some commentators have posited an increase in Islamophobia resulting from the September 11 attacks, the rise of Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant, and other terror attacks in Europe and the United States by Islamic extremists. Some have associated it with the increased presence of Muslims in the United States and in the European Union, while others view it as a response to the emergence of a global Muslim identity.

Contents

Terms

Etymology and definitions

- Debate on the term and its limitations
- Fear
- Racism
- Proposed alternatives

Origins and causes

- History of the term
- Contrasting views on Islam
- Identity politics
- Links to ideologies
- Opposition to multiculturalism

Manifestations

- Media
- Organizations
- Public opinion
- Internalized Islamophobia

Trends

- Anti-Islamic hate crimes data in the United States
- Anti-Islamic hate crimes in the European countries
- Reports by governmental organizations
- Research on Islamophobia and its correlates
- Geographic trends

Criticism of term and use

- Academic debate
- Commentary
- The Associated Press Stylebook*

Countering Islamophobia

- Europe

See also

References

External links

Terms

There are a number of other possible terms which are also used in order to refer to negative feelings and attitudes towards Islam and Muslims, such as anti-Muslimism, intolerance against Muslims, anti-Muslim prejudice, anti-Muslim bigotry, hatred of Muslims, anti-Islamism, Muslimophobia, demonisation of Islam, or demonisation of Muslims. In German, Islamophobie (fear) and Islamfeindlichkeit (hostility) are used. The Scandinavian term

Muslimhat literally means "hatred of Muslims".^[8]

When discrimination towards Muslims has placed an emphasis on their religious affiliation and adherence, it has been termed Muslimphobia, the alternative form of Muslimophobia,^[9] Islamophobia,^[10] antimuslimism and antimuslimism.^{[11][12][13]} Individuals who discriminate against Muslims in general have been termed Islamophobes, Islamophobists,^[14] anti-Muslimists,^[15] antimuslimists,^[16] islamophobiacs,^[17] anti-Muhammadan,^[18] Muslimphobes or its alternative spelling of Muslimophobes,^[19] while individuals motivated by a specific anti-Muslim agenda or bigotry have been described as being anti-mosque,^[20] anti-Shiites,^[21] (or Shiaphobes^[22]), anti-Sufism^[23] (or Sufi-phobia)^[24] and anti-Sunni (or Sunniphobes).^[25]

Etymology and definitions

The word Islamophobia is a neologism^[26] formed from Islam and -phobia, a Greek suffix used in English to form "nouns with the sense 'fear of – –', 'aversion to – –'".^[27]

According to the Oxford English Dictionary, the word means "Intense dislike or fear of Islam, esp. as a political force; hostility or prejudice towards Muslims" and is attested in English as early as 1923.^[28] The University of California at Berkeley's Islamophobia Research & Documentation Project suggested this working definition: "Islamophobia is a contrived fear or prejudice fomented by the existing Eurocentric and Orientalist global power structure. It is directed at a perceived or real Muslim threat through the maintenance and extension of existing disparities in economic, political, social and cultural relations, while rationalizing the necessity to deploy violence as a tool to achieve 'civilizational rehab' of the target communities (Muslim or otherwise). Islamophobia reintroduces and reaffirms a global racial structure through which resource distribution disparities are maintained and extended."^[29]

Debate on the term and its limitations

In 1996, the Runnymede Trust established the Commission on British Muslims and Islamophobia, chaired by Gordon Conway, the vice-chancellor of the University of Sussex. The Commission's report, Islamophobia: A Challenge for Us All, was published in November 1997 by the Home Secretary, Jack Straw. In the Runnymede report, Islamophobia was defined as "an outlook or world-view involving an unfounded dread and dislike of Muslims, which results in practices of exclusion and discrimination."^[30] Johannes Kandel, in a 2006 comment wrote that Islamophobia "is a vague term which encompasses every conceivable actual and imagined act of hostility against Muslims", and proceeds to argue that five of the criteria put forward by the Runnymede Trust are invalid.^[31]

In 2008, a workshop on 'Thinking Thru Islamophobia' was held at the University of Leeds, organized by the Centre for Ethnicity and Racism Studies, the participants included S.Sayyid, Abdoolkarim Vakil, Liz Fekete, and Gabrielle Maranci among others. The symposium proposed a definition of Islamophobia which rejected the idea of Islamophobia as being the product of closed and open views of Islam, and focused on Islamophobia as performative which problematized Muslim agency and identity. The symposium was an early attempt to bring insights from critical race theory, postcolonial and decolonial thought to bear on the question of Islamophobia.^[32]

At a 2009 symposium on "Islamophobia and Religious Discrimination", Robin Richardson, a former director of the Runnymede Trust^[33] and the editor of Islamophobia: a challenge for us all,^[34] said that "the disadvantages of the term Islamophobia are significant" on seven different grounds, including that it implies it is merely a "severe mental illness" affecting "only a tiny minority of people"; that use of the term makes those to whom it is applied "defensive and defiant" and absolves the user of "the responsibility of trying to understand them" or trying to change their views; that it implies that hostility to Muslims is divorced from factors such as skin color, immigrant status, fear of fundamentalism, or political or economic conflicts; that it conflates prejudice against Muslims in one's own country with dislike of Muslims in countries with which the West is in conflict; that it fails to distinguish between people who are against all religion from people who dislike Islam specifically; and that the actual issue being described is hostility to Muslims, "an ethno-religious identity within European countries", rather than hostility to Islam. Nonetheless, he argued that the term is here to stay, and that it is important to define it precisely.^[35]

The exact definition of Islamophobia continues to be discussed with academics such as Chris Allen saying that it lacks a clear definition.^{[36][37][38][39][40][41]} According to Erik Bleich, in his article "Defining and Researching Islamophobia", even when definitions are more specific, there is still significant variation in the precise formulations of Islamophobia. As with parallel concepts like homophobia or xenophobia, Islamophobia connotes a broader set of negative attitudes or emotions directed at individuals of groups because of perceived membership in a defined category.^[42] Mattias Gardell defines Islamophobia as "socially reproduced prejudices and aversion to Islam and Muslims, as well as actions and practices that attack, exclude or discriminate against persons on the basis that they are or perceived to be Muslim and be associated with Islam".^[43]

Fear

As opposed to being a psychological or individualistic phobia, according to professors of religion Peter Gottschalk and Gabriel Greenberg, "Islamophobia" connotes a social anxiety about Islam and Muslims.^{[44][45]} Some social scientists have adopted this definition and developed instruments to measure Islamophobia in form of fearful attitudes towards, and avoidance of, Muslims and Islam,^{[46][47]} arguing that Islamophobia should "essentially be understood as an affective part of social stigma towards Islam and Muslims, namely fear".^{47}

Racism

Several scholars consider Islamophobia to be a form of xenophobia or racism. A 2007 article in Journal of Sociology defines Islamophobia as anti-Muslim racism and a continuation of anti-Asian, anti-Turkic and anti-Arab racism.^{[48][49][50][51]} In their books Deepa Kumar and Junaid Rana have argued that formation of Islamophobic discourses has paralleled the development of other forms of racial bigotry.^[52] Similarly, John Denham has drawn parallels between modern Islamophobia and the antisemitism of the 1930s,^[53] so have Maud Olofsson,^[54] and Jan Hjärpe, among others.^{[55][56]}

Others have questioned the supposed relationship between Islamophobia and racism. Jocelyne Cesari writes that "academics are still debating the legitimacy of the term and questioning how it differs from other terms such as racism, anti-Islamism, anti-Muslimness, and anti-Semitism."^{[57][58]} Erdenir finds that "there is no consensus on the scope and content of the term and its relationship with concepts such as racism ..."^[59] and Shryock, reviewing the use of the term across national boundaries, comes to the same conclusion.^[60]

Some scholars view Islamophobia and racism as partially overlapping phenomena. Diane Frost defines Islamophobia as anti-Muslim feeling and violence based on "race" or religion.^[61] Islamophobia may also target people who have Muslim names, or have a look that is associated with Muslims.^[62] According to Alan Johnson, Islamophobia sometimes can be nothing more than xenophobia or racism "wrapped in religious terms."^[63] Sociologists Yasmin Hussain and Paul Bagguley stated that racism and Islamophobia are "analytically distinct," but "empirically inter-related".^[64]

The European Commission against Racism and Intolerance (ECRI) defines Islamophobia as "the fear of or prejudiced viewpoint towards Islam, Muslims and matters pertaining to them", adding that whether "it takes the shape of daily forms of racism and discrimination or more violent forms, Islamophobia is a violation of human rights and a threat to social cohesion".^[43]

Proposed alternatives

The concept of Islamophobia as formulated by Runnymede was also criticized by professor Fred Halliday on several levels. He writes that the target of hostility in the modern era is not Islam and its tenets as much as it is Muslims, suggesting that a more accurate term would be "Anti-Muslimism". He also states that strains and types of prejudice against Islam and Muslims vary across different nations and cultures, which is not recognized in the Runnymede analysis, which was specifically about Muslims in Britain.^[65] Poole responds that many Islamophobic discourses attack what they perceive to be Islam's tenets, while Miles and Brown write that Islamophobia is usually based upon negative stereotypes about Islam which are then translated into attacks on Muslims. They also argue that "the existence of different 'Islamophobias' does not invalidate the concept of Islamophobia any more than the existence of different racisms invalidates the concept of racism."^{[66][4][67]}

In a 2011 paper in American Behavioral Scientist, Erik Bleich stated "there is no widely accepted definition of Islamophobia that permits systematic comparative and causal analysis", and advances "indiscriminate negative attitudes or emotions directed at Islam or Muslims" as a possible solution to this issue.^[68]

In order to differentiate between prejudiced views of Islam and secularly motivated criticism of Islam, Roland Imhoff and Julia Recker formulated the concept "Islamoprejudice", which they subsequently operationalised in an experiment. The experiment showed that their definition provided a tool for accurate differentiation.^[69] Nevertheless, other researchers' experimental work indicates that, even when Westerners seem to make an effort to distinguish between criticizing (Muslim) ideas and values and respecting Muslims as persons, they still show prejudice and discrimination of Muslims—compared to non-Muslims—when these targets defend supposedly antiliberal causes.^[70]

Origins and causes

History of the term

One early use cited as the term's first use is by the painter Alphonse Étienne Dinet and Algerian intellectual Sliman ben Ibrahim in their 1918 biography of Islam's prophet Muhammad.^{[71][72]} Writing in French, they used the term islamophobic. Robin Richardson writes that in the English version of the book the word was not translated as "Islamophobia" but rather as "feelings inimical to Islam". Dahou Ezzerhouni has cited several other uses in French as early as 1910, and from 1912 to 1918.^[73] These early uses of the term did not, according to Christopher Allen, have the same meaning as in contemporary usage, as they described a fear of Islam by liberal Muslims and Muslim feminists, rather than a fear or dislike/hatred of Muslims by non-Muslims.^{[72][74]} On the other hand, Fernando Bravo López argues that Dinet and ibn Sliman's use of the term was as a criticism of overly hostile attitudes to Islam by a Belgian orientalist, Henri Lammens, whose project they saw as a "pseudo-scientific crusade in the hope of bringing Islam down once and for all." He also notes that an early definition of Islamophobia appears in the Ph.D. thesis of Alain Quellien, a French colonial bureaucrat:

For some, the Muslim is the natural and irreconcilable enemy of the Christian and the European; Islam is the negation of civilization, and barbarism, bad faith and cruelty are the best one can expect from the Mohammedans.

Speaker at demonstration of initiative We don't want Islam in the Czech Republic on 14 March 2015 in České Budějovice, Czech Republic

Furthermore, he notes that Quellien's work draws heavily on the work of the French colonial department's 1902–06 administrator, who published a work in 1906, which to a great extent mirrors John Esposito's The Islamic Threat: Myth or Reality?.^[75]

The first recorded use of the term in English, according to the Oxford English Dictionary, was in 1923 in an article in The Journal of Theological Studies.^[28] The term entered into common usage with the publication of the Runnymede Trust's report in 1997.^[76] "Kofi Annan asserted at a 2004 conference entitled "Confronting Islamophobia" that the word Islamophobia had to be coined in order to "take account of increasingly widespread bigotry".^[77]

Contrasting views on Islam

The Runnymede report contrasted "open" and "closed" views of Islam, and stated that the following "closed" views are equated with Islamophobia.^[78]

1. Islam is seen as a monolithic bloc, static and unresponsive to change.
2. It is seen as separate and "other". It does not have values in common with other cultures, is not affected by them and does not influence them.
3. It is seen as inferior to the West. It is seen as barbaric, irrational, primitive, and sexist.
4. It is seen as violent, aggressive, threatening, supportive of terrorism, and engaged in a clash of civilizations.
5. It is seen as a political ideology, used for political or military advantage.
6. Criticisms made of "the West" by Muslims are rejected out of hand.
7. Hostility towards Islam is used to justify discriminatory practices towards Muslims and exclusion of Muslims from mainstream society.
8. Anti-Muslim hostility is seen as natural and normal.

These "closed" views are contrasted, in the report, with "open" views on Islam which, while founded on respect for Islam, permit legitimate disagreement, dialogue and critique.^[79] According to Benn and Jawad, The Runnymede Trust notes that anti-Muslim discourse is increasingly seen as respectable, providing examples on how hostility towards Islam and Muslims is accepted as normal, even among those who may actively challenge other prevalent forms of discrimination.^[80]

Identity politics

It has been suggested that Islamophobia is closely related to identity politics, and gives its adherents the perceived benefit of constructing their identity in opposition to a negative, essentialized image of Muslims. This occurs in the form of self-righteousness, assignment of blame and key identity markers.^[81] Davina Bhandar writes that:^[82]

[...] the term 'cultural' has become synonymous with the category of the ethnic or minority (...). It views culture as an entity that is highly abstracted from the practices of daily life and therefore represents the illusion that there exists a spirit of the people. This formulation leads to the homogenisation of cultural identity and the ascription of particular values and proclivities onto minority cultural groups.

Hindu nationalist politician Arun Pathak organised a celebration in Varanasi to commemorate the 1992 demolition of the Babri Masjid mosque.

She views this as an ontological trap that hinders the perception of culture as something "materially situated in the living practices of the everyday, situated in time-space and not based in abstract projections of what constitutes either a particular tradition or culture."

In some societies, Islamophobia has materialized due to the portrayal of Islam and Muslims as the national "Other", where exclusion and discrimination occurs on the basis of their religion and civilization which differs with national tradition and identity. Examples include Pakistani and Algerian migrants in Britain and France respectively.^{[83][84]} This sentiment, according to Malcolm Brown and Robert Miles, significantly interacts with racism, although Islamophobia itself is not racism.^{[84][85]} Author Doug Saunders has drawn parallels between Islamophobia in the United States and its older discrimination and hate against Roman Catholics, saying that Catholicism was seen as backwards and imperial, while Catholic immigrants had poorer education and some were responsible for crime and terrorism.^{[86][87][88][89][90][90][62]}

Brown and Miles write that another feature of Islamophobic discourse is to amalgamate nationality (e.g. Saudi), religion (Islam), and politics (terrorism, fundamentalism) – while most other religions are not associated with terrorism, or even "ethnic or national distinctiveness."^[84] They feel that "many of the stereotypes and misinformation that contribute to the articulation of Islamophobia are rooted in a particular perception of Islam", such as the notion that Islam promotes terrorism – especially prevalent after the September 11, 2001 attacks.^[4]

The two-way stereotyping resulting from Islamophobia has in some instances resulted in mainstreaming of earlier controversial discourses, such as liberal attitudes towards gender equality^{[81][82]} and homosexuals.^[91] Christina Ho has warned against framing of such mainstreaming of gender equality in a colonial, paternal discourse, arguing that this may undermine minority women's ability to speak out about their concerns.^[92]

Steven Salaita contends that, since 9/11, Arab Americans have evolved from what Nadine Naber described as an invisible group in the United States into a highly visible community that directly or indirectly has an effect on the United States' culture wars, foreign policy, presidential elections and legislative tradition.^[93]

The academics S. Sayyid and Abdoolkarim Vakil maintain that Islamophobia is a response to the emergence of a distinct Muslim public identity globally, the presence of Muslims in itself not being an indicator of the degree of Islamophobia in a society. Sayyid and Vakil maintain that there are societies where virtually no Muslims live but many institutionalized forms of Islamophobia still exist in them.^[32]

Links to ideologies

Cora Alexa Døving, a senior scientist at the Norwegian Center for Studies of the Holocaust and Religious Minorities, argues that there are significant similarities between Islamophobic discourse and European pre-Nazi antisemitism.^[81] Among the concerns are imagined threats of minority growth and domination, threats to traditional institutions and customs, skepticism of integration, threats to secularism, fears of sexual crimes, fears of misogyny, fears based on historical cultural inferiority, hostility to modern Western Enlightenment values, etc.

Matti Bunzl has argued that there are important differences between Islamophobia and antisemitism. While antisemitism was a phenomenon closely connected to European nation-building processes, he sees Islamophobia as having the concern of European civilization as its focal point.^[94] Døving, on the other hand, maintains that, at least in Norway, the Islamophobic discourse has a clear national element.^[81] In a reply to Bunzl, French scholar of Jewish history, Esther Benbassa, agrees with him in that he draws a clear connection between modern hostile and essentializing sentiments towards Muslims and historical antisemitism. However, she argues against the use of the term Islamophobia, since, in her opinion, it attracts unwarranted attention to an underlying racist current.^[95]

The head of the Media Responsibility Institute in Erlangen, Sabine Schiffer, and researcher Constantin Wagner, who also define Islamophobia as anti-Muslim racism, outline additional similarities and differences between Islamophobia and antisemitism.^[96] They point out the existence of equivalent notions such as "Judaisation/Islamisation", and metaphors such as "a state within a state" are used in relation to both Jews and Muslims. In addition, both discourses make use of, among other rhetorical instruments, "religious imperatives" supposedly "proven" by religious sources, and conspiracy theories.

The differences between Islamophobia and antisemitism consist of the nature of the perceived threats to the "Christian West". Muslims are perceived as "inferior" and as a visible "external threat", while on the other hand, Jews are perceived as "omnipotent" and as an invisible "internal threat". However, Schiffer and Wagner also note that there is a growing tendency to view Muslims as a privileged group that constitute an "internal threat" and that this convergence between the two discourses makes "it more and more necessary to use findings from the study of anti-Semitism to analyse Islamophobia". Schiffer and Wagner conclude,

The achievement in the study of anti-Semitism of examining Jewry and anti-Semitism separately must also be transferred to other racisms, such as Islamophobia. We do not need more information about Islam, but more information about the making of racist stereotypes in general.

The publication Social Work and Minorities: European Perspectives describes Islamophobia as the new form of racism in Europe,^[97] arguing that "Islamophobia is as much a form of racism as anti-semitism, a term more commonly encountered in Europe as a sibling of racism, xenophobia and Intolerance."^[98] Edward Said considers Islamophobia as it is evinced in Orientalism to be a trend in a more general antisemitic Western tradition.^{[99][100]} Others note that there has been a transition from anti-Asian and anti-Arab racism to anti-Muslim racism,^[101] while some note a racialization of religion.^[102]

According to a 2012 report by a UK anti-racism group, counter-jihadist outfits in Europe and North America are becoming more cohesive by forging alliances, with 190 groups now identified as promoting an Islamophobic agenda.^[103] In Islamophobia and its consequences on young people (p. 6) Ingrid Remberg writes "Whether it takes the shape of daily forms of racism and discrimination or more violent forms, Islamophobia is a violation of human rights and a threat to social cohesion.". Professor John Esposito of Georgetown University calls Islamophobia "the new anti-Semitism".^[104]

In their 2018 American Muslim Poll (<https://www.ispu.org/american-muslim-poll-2018-full-report/>), the Institute for Social Policy and Understanding found that when it came to their Islamophobia index (see Public Opinion), they found that those who scored higher on the index, (i.e. more islamophobic) were, "associated with 1) greater acceptance of targeting civilians, whether it is a military or individual/small group that is doling out the violence, 2) greater acquiescence to limiting both press freedoms and institutional checks following a hypothetical terror attack, and 3) greater support for the so-called "Muslim ban" and the surveillance of American mosques (or their outright building prohibition)."^[105]

Mohamed Nimer compares Islamophobia with anti-Americanism. He argues that while both Islam and America can be subject to legitimate criticisms without detesting a people as a whole, bigotry against both are on the rise.^[106]

Opposition to multiculturalism

According to Gabrielle Maranci, the increasing Islamophobia in the West is related to a rising repudiation of multiculturalism. Maranci concludes that "Islamophobia is a 'phobia' of multiculturalism and the disruptive effect that Islam can have in Europe and the West through transcultural processes."^[107]

Manifestations

Media

According to Elizabeth Poole in the Encyclopedia of Race and Ethnic Studies, the media have been criticized for perpetrating Islamophobia. She cites a case study examining a sample of articles in the British press from between 1994 and 2004, which concluded that Muslim viewpoints were underrepresented and that issues involving Muslims usually depicted them in a negative light. Such portrayals, according to Poole, include the depiction of Islam and Muslims as a threat to Western security and values.^[108] Benn and Jawad write that hostility towards Islam and Muslims are "closely linked to media portrayals of Islam as barbaric, irrational, primitive and sexist."^[80] Egorova and Tudor cite European researchers in suggesting that expressions used in the media such as "Islamic terrorism", "Islamic bombs" and "violent Islam" have resulted in a negative perception of Islam.^[5] John E. Richardson's 2004 book (Mis)representing Islam: the racism and rhetoric of British broadsheet newspapers, criticized the British media for propagating negative stereotypes of Muslims and fueling anti-Muslim prejudice.^[109] In another study conducted by John E. Richardson, he found that 85% of mainstream newspaper articles treated Muslims as a homogeneous mass who were imagined as a threat to British society.^[110]

An American protester holding a sign describing himself as Islamophobic

In 2009, Mehdi Hasan in the New Statesman criticized Western media for over-reporting a few Islamist terrorist incidents but under-reporting the much larger number of planned non-Islamist terrorist attacks carried out by "non-Irish white folks".^[111] A 2012 study indicates that Muslims across different European countries, such as France, Germany and the United Kingdom, experience the highest degree of Islamophobia in the media.^[47] Media personalities have been accused of Islamophobia. The obituary in The Guardian for the Italian journalist Oriana Fallaci described her as "notorious for her Islamophobia" [sic].^[112] The Institute for Social Policy and Understanding published a report in 2018 where they stated, "In terms of print media coverage, Muslim-perceived perpetrators received twice the absolute quantity of media coverage as their non-Muslim counterparts in the cases of violent completed acts. For "foiled" plots, they received seven and half times the media coverage as their counterparts."^[113]

The term "Islamophobia industry" has been coined by Nathan Lean and John Esposito in the 2012 book The Islamophobia Industry: How the Right Manufactures Fear of Muslims. Unlike the relationship of a buyer and a seller, it is a relationship of mutual benefit, where ideologies and political proclivities converge to advance the same agenda.^[114] The "Islamophobia industry" has since been discussed by other scholars including Joseph Kaminski,^[115] Hatem Bazian,^[116] Arlene Stein, Zakiya Salime, Reza Aslan,^[117] Erdoan A. Shipoli, and Deepa Kumar, the latter drawing a comparison between the "Islamophobia industry" and Cold War era McCarthyism.^[118]

Some media outlets are working explicitly against Islamophobia. In 2008 Fairness and Accuracy in Reporting ("FAIR") published a study "Smearcasting, How Islamophobes Spread Bigotry, Fear and Misinformation." The report cites several instances where mainstream or close to mainstream journalists, authors and academics have made analyses that essentialize negative traits as an inherent part of Muslims' moral makeup.^[119] FAIR also established the "Forum Against Islamophobia and Racism", designed to monitor coverage in the media and establish dialogue with media organizations. Following the attacks of 11 September 2001, the Islamic Society of Britain's "Islam Awareness Week" and the "Best of British Islam Festival" were introduced to improve community relations and raise awareness about Islam.^[120] In 2012 the Organisation of Islamic Cooperation stated that they will launch a TV channel to counter Islamophobia.^[121]

There are growing instances of Islamophobia in Hindi cinema, or Bollywood, in films such as Aamir (2008), New York (2009) and My Name is Khan (2010), which corresponds to a growing anti-minorities sentiment that followed the resurgence of the Hindu right.^{[122][123]}

An English Defence League demonstration. The placard reads Shut down the mosque command and control centre.

Organizations

A report from the University of California Berkeley and the Council on American-Islamic Relations estimated that $206 million was funded to 33 groups whose primary purpose was "to promote prejudice against, or hatred of, Islam and Muslims" in the United States between 2008 and 2013, with a total of 74 groups contributing to Islamophobia in the United States during that period.^[124]

Stop Islamization of America (SIOA) and the Freedom Defense Initiative are designated as hate groups by the Anti-Defamation League^[125] and the Southern Poverty Law Center.^{[126][127][128]} In August 2012 SIOA generated media publicity by sponsoring billboards in New York City Subway stations claiming there had been 19,250 terrorist attacks by Muslims since 9/11 and stating "it's not Islamophobia, it's Islamorealism."^[129] It later ran advertisements reading "In any war between the civilized man and the savage, support the civilized man. Support Israel. Defeat Jihad." Several groups condemned the advertisements as "hate speech" about all Muslims^{[130][131][132]} while others defended the ad as a narrow criticism of violent Jihadism.^[133] In early January 2013 the Freedom Defense Initiative put up advertisements next to 228 clocks in 39 New York subway stations showing the 2001 attacks on the World Trade Center with a quote attributed to the 151st verse of chapter 3 of the Quran: "Soon shall we cast terror into the hearts of the unbelievers."^{[134][135]} The New York City Transit Authority, which said it would have to carry the advertisements on First Amendment grounds, insisted that 25% of the ad contain a Transit Authority disclaimer.^{[136][137]} These advertisements also were criticized.^{[138][139]}

The English Defence League (EDL), an organization in the United Kingdom, has been described as anti-Muslim. It was formed in 2009 to oppose what it considers to be a spread of Islamism, Sharia law and Islamic extremism in the UK.^[140] The EDL's former leader, Tommy Robinson, left the group in 2013 saying it had become too extreme and that street protests were ineffective.^[141]

Furthermore, the 7 July 2005 London bombings and the resulting efforts of the British civil and law enforcement authorities to help seek British Muslims' help in identifying potential threats to create prevention is observed by Michael Lavalette as institutionalized Islamophobia. Lavalette alleges that there is a continuity between the former two British governments over prevention that aims to stop young Muslim people from being misled, misdirected and recruited by extremists who exploit grievances for their own "jihadist" endeavors. Asking and concentrating on Muslim communities and young muslims to prevent future instances, by the authorities, is in itself Islamophobia as such since involvement of Muslim communities will highlight and endorse their compassion for Britain and negate the perceived threats from within their communities.^[142]

Public opinion

The extent of negative attitudes towards Muslims varies across different parts of Europe.

Unfavorable views of Muslims, 2016 ^[6]
Country	Percent
Hungary	72%
Italy	69%
Poland	66%
Greece	65%
Spain	50%
Netherlands	35%
Sweden	35%
France	29%
Germany	29%
United Kingdom	28%

Anti-Islam rally in Poland in 2015

Within the United States specifically, despite the rise in islamophobia, the Institute for Social Policy and Understanding (ISPU) has also found that the most Americans, "remain steadfast in their commitment to the country's fundamental freedoms", one of which being the freedom of religion. 86% of all Americans polled by ISPU said they wanted to "live in a country where no one is targeted for their religious identity", 83% of the general public told ISPU they support "protecting the civil rights of American Muslims", and overall, 66% of Americans, "believe negative political rhetoric toward Muslims is harmful to U.S.". Average Americans also seem to be aware of the fact that islamophobia produces discriminatory consequences for Muslims in America, with 65% of the general public agreeing.^[105]

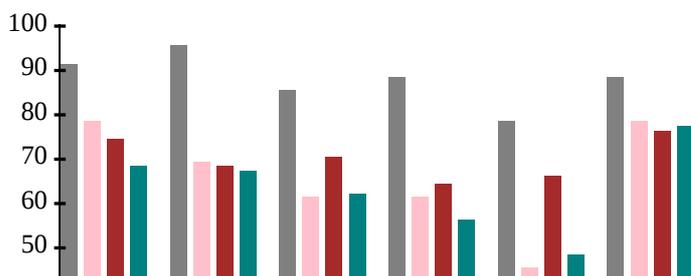

The chart below displays collected data from the ISPU 2018 American Muslim Poll ^[105] which surveyed six different faith populations in the United States. The statements featured in this chart were asked to participants who then responded on a scale from strongly agree to strongly disagree. The total percentage of those who answered agree and strongly agree are depicted as follows (Note: the phrase "W. Evang." stands for White Evangelical, which was the specific demographic surveyed):

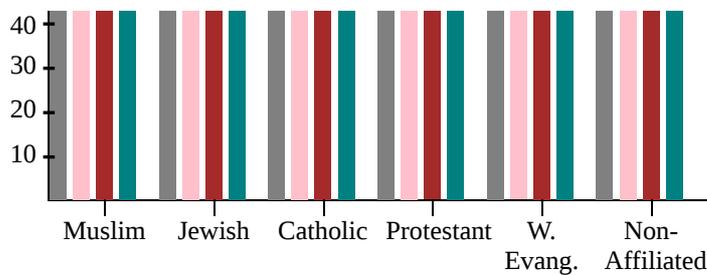

Question 1: "I want to live in a country where no one is targeted for their religious identity."

Question 2: "The negative things politicians say regarding Muslims is harmful to our country."

Question 3: "Most Muslims living in the United States are no more responsible for violence carried out by a Muslim than anyone else."

Question 4: "Most Muslims living in the United States are victims of discrimination because of their faith."

Question 1 (% Net agree)
 Question 3 (% Net Agree)
 Question 2 (% Net agree)
 Question 4 (% Net agree)

The table below represents the Islamophobia Index, also from the 2018 ISPU poll.^[105] This data displays an index of islamophobia among faith populations in the United States.

ISPU Islamophobia Index^[105]

Most Muslims living in the Unites States...(% Net agree shown)	Muslim	Jewish	Catholic	Protestant	White Evangelical	Non-Affiliated	General Public
Are more prone to violence	18%	15%	12%	13%	23%	8%	13%
Discriminate against women	12%	23%	29%	30%	36%	18%	26%
Are hostile to the United States	12%	13%	9%	14%	23%	8%	12%
Are less civilized than other people	8%	6%	4%	6%	10%	1%	6%
Are partially responsible for acts of violence carried out by other Muslims	10%	16%	11%	12%	14%	8%	12%
Index (0 min- 100 max)	17	22	22	31	40	14	24

Internalized Islamophobia

ISPU also highlighted a particular trend in relation to anti-Muslim sentiment in the U.S.- internalized islamophobia among Muslim populations themselves. When asked if they felt most people want them to be ashamed of their faith identity, 30% of muslims agreed (higher percentage than any other faith group). When asked if they believed that their faith community was more prone to negative behavior than other faith communities, 30% of Muslims agreed, again, a higher percentage than other faith groups.^[105]

Trends

Islamophobia has become a topic of increasing sociological and political importance.^[84] According to Benn and Jawad, Islamophobia has increased since Ayatollah Khomeini's 1989 fatwa inciting Muslims to attempt to murder Salman Rushdie, the author of The Satanic Verses, and since the 11 September attacks (in 2001).^[143] Anthropologist Steven Vertovec writes that the purported growth in Islamophobia may be associated with increased Muslim presence in society and successes.^{[144][145][146]} He suggests a circular model, where increased hostility towards Islam and Muslims results in governmental countermeasures such as institutional guidelines and changes to legislation, which itself may fuel further Islamophobia due to increased accommodation for Muslims in public life. Vertovec concludes: "As the public sphere shifts to provide a more prominent place for Muslims, Islamophobic tendencies may amplify."^{[144][145][146]}

An anti-Islamic protest in Poland

Patel, Humphries, and Naik (1998) claim that "Islamophobia has always been present in Western countries and cultures. In the last two decades, it has become accentuated, explicit and extreme."^{[147][148][149]} However, Vertovec (2002) states that some have observed that Islamophobia has not necessarily escalated in the past decades, but that there has been increased public scrutiny of it.^{[144][145][146]} According to Abduljalil Sajid, one of the members of the Runnymede Trust's Commission on British Muslims and Islamophobia, "Islamophobias" have existed in varying strains throughout history, with each version possessing its own distinct features as well as similarities or adaptations from others.^[150]

In 2005 Ziauddin Sardar, an Islamic scholar, wrote in the New Statesman that Islamophobia is a widespread European phenomenon.^[151] He noted that each country has anti-Muslim political figures, citing Jean-Marie Le Pen in France; Pim Fortuyn in the Netherlands; and Philippe van der Sande of Vlaams Blok, a Flemish nationalist party in Belgium. Sardar argued that Europe is "post-colonial, but ambivalent." Minorities are regarded as acceptable as an underclass of menial workers, but if they want to be upwardly mobile anti-Muslim prejudice rises to the surface. Wolfram Richter, professor of economics at Dortmund University of Technology, told Sardar: "I am afraid we have not learned from our history.

My main fear is that what we did to Jews we may now do to Muslims. The next holocaust would be against Muslims."^[151] Similar fears, as noted by Kenan Malik in his book From Fatwa to Jihad, had been previously expressed in the UK by Muslim philosopher Shabbir Akhtar in 1989, and Massoud Shadjareh, chair of the Islamic Human Rights Commission in 2000. In 2006 Salma Yaqoob, a Respect Party Councillor, claimed that Muslims in Britain were "subject to attacks reminiscent of the gathering storm of anti-Semitism in the first decades of the last century."^[152] Malik, a senior visiting fellow in the Department of Political, International and Policy Studies at the University of Surrey, has described these claims of a brewing holocaust as "hysterical to the point of delusion"; whereas Jews in Hitler's Germany were given the official designation of Untermenschen, and were subject to escalating legislation which diminished and ultimately removed their rights as citizens, Malik noted that in cases where "Muslims are singled out in Britain, it is often for privileged treatment" such as the 2005 legislation banning "incitement to religious hatred", the special funding Muslim organizations and bodies receive from local and national government, the special provisions made by workplaces, school and leisure centres for Muslims, and even suggestions by the Archbishop of Canterbury Rowan Williams and the former Lord Chief Justice, Lord Phillips, that sharia law should be introduced into Britain.^[153] The fact is, wrote Malik, that such well-respected public figures as Akhtar, Shadjareh and Yaqoob need "a history lesson about the real Holocaust reveals how warped the Muslim grievance culture has become."^[153]

In 2006 ABC News reported that "public views of Islam are one casualty of the post-Sept. 11, 2001 conflict: Nearly six in 10 Americans think the religion is prone to violent extremism, nearly half regard it unfavorably, and a remarkable one in four admits to prejudicial feelings against Muslims and Arabs alike." They also report that 27 percent of Americans admit feelings of prejudice against Muslims.^[154] Gallup polls in 2006 found that 40 percent of Americans admit to prejudice against Muslims, and 39 percent believe Muslims should carry special identification.^[155] These trends have only worsened with the use of Islamophobia as a campaign tactic during the 2008 American presidential election (with several Republican politicians and pundits, including Donald Trump, asserting that Democratic candidate Barack Obama is secretly a Muslim), during the 2010 mid-term elections (during which a proposed Islamic community center was dubbed the "Ground Zero Mosque"^[156]), and the 2016 presidential election, during which Republican nominee Donald Trump proposed banning the entrance into the country of all Muslims. Associate Professor Deepa Kumar writes that "Islamophobia is about politics rather than religion per se"^[157] and that modern-day demonization of Arabs and Muslims by US politicians and others is racist and Islamophobic, and employed in support of what she describes as an unjust war. About the public impact of this rhetoric, she says that "One of the consequences of the relentless attacks on Islam and Muslims by politicians and the media is that Islamophobic sentiment is on the rise." She also chides some "people on the left" for using the same "Islamophobic logic as the Bush regime".^[158] In this regards, Kumar confirms the assertions of Stephen Sheehi, who "conceptualises Islamophobia as an ideological formation within the context of the American empire. Doing so "allows us to remove it from the hands of 'culture' or from the myth of a single creator or progenitor, whether it be a person, organisation or community." An ideological formation, in this telling, is a constellation of networks that produce, proliferate, benefit from, and traffic in Islamophobic discourses."^[159]

A protester opposing the Park51 project, carries an anti-sharia sign.

The writer and scholar on religion Reza Aslan has said that "Islamophobia has become so mainstream in this country that Americans have been trained to expect violence against Muslims – not excuse it, but expect it"^[160]

A January 2010 British Social Attitudes Survey found that the British public "is far more likely to hold negative views of Muslims than of any other religious group,"^[161] with "just one in four" feeling "positively about Islam," and a "majority of the country would be concerned if a mosque was built in their area, while only 15 per cent expressed similar qualms about the opening of a church."^[162]

A 2016 report by CAIR and University of California, Berkeley's Center for Race and Gender said that groups promoting islamophobia in the US had access to 206 million USD between 2008 and 2013. The author of the report said that "The hate that these groups are funding and inciting is having real consequences like attacks on mosques all over the country and new laws discriminating against Muslims in America."^[163]

Islamophobia has consequences. In the United States, religious discrimination against Muslims has become a significant issues of concern. In 2018, The Institute for Social Policy and Understanding found that out of the groups studied, Muslims are the most likely faith community to experience religious discrimination, the data having been that way since 2015. Despite 61% of Muslims reporting experiencing religious discrimination at some level and 62% reporting that most Americans held negative stereotypes about their community, 23% reported that they faith made them feel "out of place in the world".^[105] There are intersections with racial identity and gender identity, with 73% of Arabs surveyed being more likely to experience religious discrimination, and Muslim women (75%) and youth (75%) being the most likely to report experiencing racial discrimination. The study also found that, although, "most Muslims (86%) express pride in their faith identity, they are the most likely group studied to agree that others want them to feel shame for that identity (30% of Muslims vs. 12% of Jews, 16% of non-affiliated, and 4–6% of Christian groups)."^[105]

Anti-Islamic hate crimes data in the United States

Data on types of hate crimes have been collected by the U.S. FBI since 1992, to carry out the dictates of the 1990 Hate Crime Statistics Act. Hate crime offenses include crimes against persons (such as assaults) and against property (such as arson), and are classified by various race-based, religion-based, and other motivations.

The data show that recorded anti-Islamic hate crimes in the United States jumped dramatically in 2001. Anti-Islamic hate crimes then subsided, but continued at a significantly higher pace than in pre-2001 years. The step up is in contrast to decreases in total hate crimes and to the decline in overall crime in the U.S. since the 1990s.

Specifically, the FBI's annual hate crimes statistics reports from 1996 to 2013 document average numbers of anti-Islamic offenses at 31 per year before 2001, then a leap to 546 in 2001 (the year of 9-11 attacks), and averaging 159 per since. Among those offenses are anti-Islamic arson incidents which have a similar pattern: arson incidents averaged .4 per year pre-2001, jumped to 18 in 2001, and averaged 1.5 annually since.^[164]

Year-by-year anti-Islamic hate crimes, all hate crimes, and arson subtotals are as follows:

Year	Anti-Islamic hate crimes		All hate crimes
	Arson offenses	Total offenses	Arson offenses	Total offenses
1996	0	33	75	10,706
1997	1	31	60	9,861
1998	0	22	50	9,235
1999	1	34	48	9,301
2000	0	33	52	9,430
2001	18	546	90	11,451
2002	0	170	38	8,832
2003	2	155	34	8,715
2004	2	193	44	9,035
2005	0	146	39	8,380
2006	0	191	41	9,080
2007	0	133	40	9,006
2008	5	123	53	9,168
2009	1	128	41	7,789
2010	1	186	42	7,699
2011	2	175	42	7,254
2012	4	149	38	6,718
2013	1	165	36	6,933
Total	38	2,613	863	158,593
Average	2.1	145.2	47.9	8810.7
1996–2000 avg	.40	30.6	57.0	9,707
2001	18	546	90	11,451
2002–2013 avg	1.50	159.5	40.7	8,217

In contrast, the overall numbers of arson and total offenses declined from pre-2001 to post-2001.

Anti-Islamic hate crimes in the European countries

There have also been reports of hate crimes targeting Muslims across Europe. These incidents have increased after terrorist attacks by extremist groups such as ISIL.^[165] Far-right and right-wing populist political parties and organizations have also been accused of fueling fear and hatred towards Muslims.^{[166][167][168][169]} Hate crimes such as arson and physical violence have been attempted or have occurred in Norway,^[170] Poland,^{[171][172]} Sweden,^[173] France,^[174] Spain,^[175] Denmark,^[176] Germany^[177] and Great Britain.^[178] Politicians have also made anti-Muslim comments when discussing European migrant crisis.^{[179][180][181]}

Reports by governmental organizations

The largest project monitoring Islamophobia was undertaken following 9/11 by the EU watchdog, European Monitoring Centre on Racism and Xenophobia (EUMC). Their May 2002 report "Summary report on Islamophobia in the EU after 11 September 2001", written by Chris Allen and Jorgen S. Nielsen of the University of Birmingham, was based on 75 reports – 15 from each EU member nation.^{[183][184]} The report highlighted the regularity with which ordinary Muslims became targets for abusive and sometimes violent retaliatory attacks after 9/11. Despite localized differences within each member nation, the

A mannequin symbolizing a Muslim in a keffiyeh, strapped to a "Made in the USA" bomb display at a protest of Park51 in New York City.

A protest in Cincinnati, Ohio

Protests against Executive Order 13769 in Tehran, Iran, 10 February 2017

recurrence of attacks on recognizable and visible traits of Islam and Muslims was the report's most significant finding. Incidents consisted of verbal abuse, blaming all Muslims for terrorism, forcibly removing women's hijabs, spitting on Muslims, calling children "Osama", and random assaults. A number of Muslims were hospitalized and in one instance paralyzed.^[184] The report also discussed the portrayal of Muslims in the media. Inherent negativity, stereotypical images, fantastical representations, and exaggerated caricatures were all identified. The report concluded that "a greater receptivity towards anti-Muslim and other xenophobic ideas and sentiments has, and may well continue, to become more tolerated."^[184]

The EUMC has since released a number of publications related to Islamophobia, including The Fight against Antisemitism and Islamophobia: Bringing Communities together (European Round Tables Meetings) (2003) and Muslims in the European Union: Discrimination and Islamophobia (2006).^[185]

Professor in History of Religion, Anne Sophie Roald, states that Islamophobia was recognized as a form of intolerance alongside xenophobia and antisemitism at the "Stockholm International Forum on Combating Intolerance",^[186] held in January 2001.^[187]

The conference, attended by UN Secretary General Kofi Annan, High Commissioner for Human Rights Mary Robinson, the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe Secretary General Ján Kubis and representatives of the European Union and Council of Europe, adopted a declaration to combat "genocide, ethnic cleansing, racism, antisemitism, Islamophobia and xenophobia, and to combat all forms of racial discrimination and intolerance related to it."^[188]

The Organisation of Islamic Cooperation, in its 5th report to Islamophobia Observatory of 2012, found an "institutionalization and legitimization of the phenomenon of Islamophobia" in the West over the previous five years.^[189]

In 2014 Integrationsverket (the Swedish National Integration Board) defined Islamophobia as "racism and discrimination expressed towards Muslims."^[190]

In 2016, the European Islamophobia Report (EIR) presented the "European Islamophobia Report 2015"^{[191][192]} at European Parliament which analyzes the "trends in the spread of Islamophobia" in 25 European states in 2015.^[193] The EIR defines Islamophobia as anti-Muslim racism. While not every criticism of Muslims or Islam is necessarily Islamophobic, anti-Muslim sentiments expressed through the dominant group scapegoating and excluding Muslims for the sake of power is.^[194]

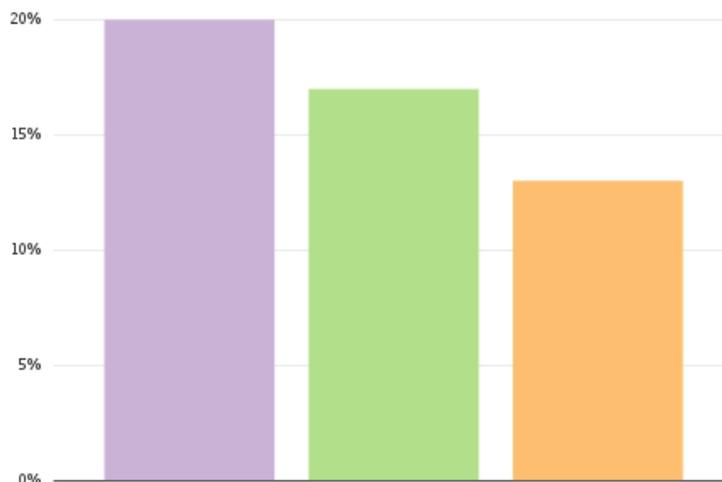

Research on Islamophobia and its correlates

Various studies have been conducted to investigate Islamophobia and its correlates among majority populations and among Muslim minorities themselves. To start with, an experimental study showed that anti-Muslim attitudes may be stronger than more general xenophobic attitudes.^[196] Moreover, studies indicate that anti-Muslim prejudice among majority populations is primarily explained by the perception of Muslims as a cultural threat, rather than as a threat towards the respective nation's economy.^{[197][198][199]}

Studies focusing on the experience of Islamophobia among Muslims have shown that the experience of religious discrimination is associated with lower national identification and higher religious identification.^{[200][201]} In other words, religious discrimination seems to lead Muslims to increase their identification with their religion and to decrease their identification with their nation of residence. Some studies further indicate that societal Islamophobia negatively influences Muslim minorities' health.^{[47][202]} One of the studies showed that the perception of an Islamophobic society is associated with more psychological problems, such as depression and nervousness, regardless whether the respective individual had personally experienced religious discrimination.^[47] As the authors of the study suggest, anti-discrimination laws may therefore be insufficient to fully protect Muslim minorities from an environment which is hostile towards their religious group.

Farid Hafez and Enes Bayrakli publish an annual European Islamophobia Report since 2015.^[203] The European Islamophobia Report aims to enable policymakers as well as the public to discuss the issue of Islamophobia with the help of qualitative data. It is the first report to cover a wide range of Eastern European countries like Serbia, Croatia, Hungary, Lithuania, and Latvia. Farid Hafez is also editor of the German-English Islamophobia Studies Yearbook.^[204]

Geographic trends

By EDJN Created with LocalFocus

Source: Eurobarometer 4

According to a survey conducted by the European Commission in 2015 13% of the respondents would be completely uncomfortable about working with a Muslim person (orange), compared with 17% with a transgender or transsexual person (green) and 20% with a Roma person (violet).^[182]

An increase of Islamophobia in Russia follows the growing influence of the strongly conservative sect of Wahhabism, according to Nikolai Sintsov of the National Anti-Terrorist Committee.^[205] Various translations of the Qur'an have been banned by the Russian government for promoting extremism and Muslim supremacy.^{[206][207]} Anti-Muslim rhetoric is on the rise in Georgia.^[208] In Greece, Islamophobia accompanies anti-immigrant sentiment, as immigrants are now 15% of the country's population and 90% of the EU's illegal entries are through Greece.^[209] In France Islamophobia is tied, in part, to the nation's long-standing tradition of secularism.^[210] In Burma the 969 Movement has been accused of events such as the 2012 Rakhine State riots.

Jocelyne Cesari, in her study of discrimination against Muslims in Europe,^[211] finds that anti-Islamic sentiment may be difficult to separate from other drivers of discrimination. Because Muslims are mainly from immigrant backgrounds and the largest group of immigrants in many Western European countries, xenophobia overlaps with Islamophobia, and a person may have one, the other, or both. So, for example, some people who have a negative perception of and attitude toward Muslims may also show this toward non-Muslim immigrants, either as a whole or certain groups (such as, for example, Eastern Europeans, sub-Saharan Africans, or Roma), whereas others would not. Nigel Farage, for example, is anti-EU and in favor of crackdowns on immigration from Eastern Europe, but is favourable to immigration from Islamic Commonwealth countries such as Nigeria and Pakistan.^[212] In the United States, where immigrants from Latin America and Asia dominate and Muslims are a comparatively small fraction, xenophobia and Islamophobia may be more easily separable. Classism is another overlapping factor in some nations. Muslims have lower income and poorer education in France, Spain, Germany, and the Netherlands while Muslims in the US have higher income and education than the general population. In the UK, Islam is seen as a threat to secularism in response to the calls by some Muslims for blasphemy laws. In the Netherlands, Islam is seen as a socially conservative force that threatens gender equality and the acceptance of homosexuality.

The European Network Against Racism (ENAR) reports that Islamophobic crimes are on the increase in France, England and Wales. In Sweden crimes with an Islamophobic motive increased by 69% from 2009 to 2013.^[213]

A report from Australia has found that the levels of Islamophobia among Buddhists and Hindus are significantly higher than among followers of other religions.^[214]

Criticism of term and use

Although by the first decade of the 21st century the term "Islamophobia" had become widely recognized and used,^[215] its use, its construction and the concept itself have been criticized. Roland Imhoff and Julia Recker, in an article that puts forward the term "Islamoprejudice" as a better alternative, write that "... few concepts have been debated as heatedly over the last ten years as the term Islamophobia."^[69]

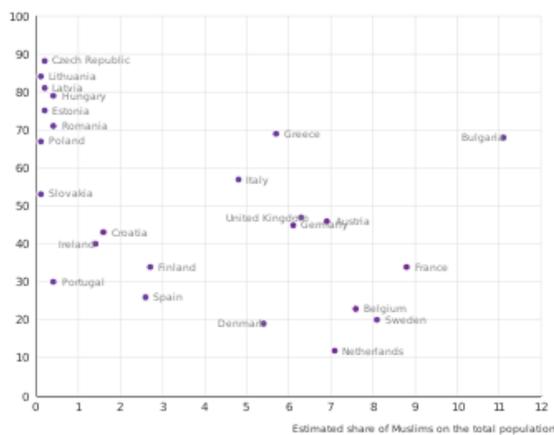

Academic debate

Jocelyne Cesari reported widespread challenges in the use and meaning of the term in 2006.^{[74][216]} According to The Oxford Encyclopedia of Islam and Politics, "Much debate has surrounded the use of the term, questioning its adequacy as an appropriate and meaningful descriptor. However, since Islamophobia has broadly entered the social and political lexicon, arguments about the appropriateness of the term now seem outdated"^[217] At the same time, according to a 2014 edition of A Dictionary of Sociology by Oxford University Press, "the exact meaning of Islamophobia continues to be debated amongst academics and policymakers alike." The term has proven problematic and is viewed by some as an obstacle to constructive criticism of Islam. Its detractors fear that it can be applied to any critique of Islamic practices and beliefs, suggesting terms such as "anti-Muslim" instead.^[218]

The classification of "closed" and "open" views set out in the Runnymede report has been criticized as an oversimplification of a complex issue by scholars like Chris Allen, Fred Halliday, and Kenan Malik.^[219] Paul Jackson, in a critical study of the anti-Islamic English Defence League, argues that the criteria put forward by the Runnymede report for Islamophobia "can allow for any criticism of Muslim societies to be dismissed...". He argues that both jihadi Islamists and far right activists use the term "to deflect attention away from more nuanced discussions on the make-up of Muslim communities", feeding "a language of polarised polemics". On one hand, it can be used "to close down discussion on genuine areas of criticism" regarding jihadi ideologies, which in turn has resulted in all accusations of Islamophobia to be dismissed as "spurious" by far right activists. Consequently, the term is "losing much [of its] analytical value".^[220]

European public opinion and Muslims

Negative attitudes towards Muslims (%)

By EDJN Created with LocalFocus

Source: PEW Research Center, 2012

According to data by the Pew Research Center elaborated by VoxEurop, in European Union countries the negative attitude towards Muslims is inversely proportional to actual presence^[195]

An anti-Islam protest in the United States

Professor Eli Gündör wrote that the term Islamophobia should be replaced with "Muslimophobia".^[221] As Islamophobia is "a rejection of a population on the grounds of Muslimness", other researches suggest "Muslimism".^[222]

Professor Mohammad H. Tamdgidi of the University of Massachusetts, Boston, has generally endorsed the definition of Islamophobia as defined by the Runnymede Trust's Islamophobia: A Challenge for Us All. However, he notes that the report's list of "open" views of Islam itself presents "an inadvertent definitional framework for Islamophilia": that is, it "falls in the trap of regarding Islam monolithically, in turn as being characterized by one or another trait, and does not adequately express the complex heterogeneity of a historical phenomenon whose contradictory interpretations, traditions, and sociopolitical trends have been shaped and has in turn been shaped, as in the case of any world tradition, by other world-historical forces."^[223]

Philosopher Michael Walzer says that fear of religious militancy, such as "of Hindutva zealots in India, of messianic Zionists in Israel, and of rampaging Buddhist monks in Myanmar", is not necessarily an irrational phobia, and compares fear of Islamic extremism with the fear Muslims and Jews could feel towards Christians during the crusades.^[224] However, he also writes that:

Islamophobia is a form of religious intolerance, even religious hatred, and it would be wrong for any leftists to support bigots in Europe and the United States who deliberately misunderstand and misrepresent contemporary Muslims. They make no distinction between the historic religion and the zealots of this moment; they regard every Muslim immigrant in a Western country as a potential terrorist; and they fail to acknowledge the towering achievements of Muslim philosophers, poets, and artists over many centuries.^[224]

Commentary

In the wake of the Jyllands-Posten Muhammad cartoons controversy, a group of 12 writers, including novelist Salman Rushdie, signed a manifesto entitled Together facing the new totalitarianism in the French weekly satirical newspaper Charlie Hebdo, warning against the use of the term Islamophobia to prevent criticism of "Islamic totalitarianism".^{[225][226]} Writing in the New Humanist, philosopher Piers Benn suggests that people who fear the rise of Islamophobia foster an environment "not intellectually or morally healthy", to the point that what he calls "Islamophobia-phobia" can undermine "critical scrutiny of Islam as somehow impolite, or ignorant of the religion's true nature."^[227]

Alan Posener and Alan Johnson have written that, while the idea of Islamophobia is sometimes misused, those who claim that hatred of Muslims is justified as opposition to Islamism actually undermine the struggle against Islamism.^[63] Roger Kimball argues that the word "Islamophobia" is inherently a prohibition or fear of criticizing of Islamic extremism.^[228] According to Pascal Bruckner, the term was invented by Iranian fundamentalists in the late 1970s analogous to "xenophobia" in order to denounce as racism what he feels is legitimate criticism of Islam.^[229] The author Sam Harris, while denouncing bigotry, racism, and prejudice against Muslims or Arabs, rejects the term Islamophobia^[230] as an invented psychological disorder, and states criticizing those Islamic beliefs and practices he believes pose a threat to civil society is not a form of bigotry or racism.^[231] Similarly, Pascal Bruckner calls the term "a clever invention because it amounts to making Islam a subject that one cannot touch without being accused of racism."^[232]

French Prime Minister Manuel Valls said in January 2015 following the Charlie Hebdo shooting "It is very important to make clear to people that Islam has nothing to do with ISIS. There is a prejudice in society about this, but on the other hand, I refuse to use this term 'Islamophobia,' because those who use this word are trying to invalidate any criticism at all of Islamist ideology. The charge of 'Islamophobia' is used to silence people".^[233]

Writing in 2008 Ed Husain, a former member of Hizb ut-Tahrir and co-founder of Quilliam,^[234] said that under pressure from Islamist extremists, "'Islamophobia' has become accepted as a phenomenon on a par with racism", claiming that "Outside a few flashpoints where the BNP is at work, most Muslims would be hard-pressed to identify Islamophobia in their lives".^[235]

Salman Rushdie criticized the coinage of the word 'Islamophobia' saying that it "was an addition to the vocabulary of Humpty Dumpty Newspeak. It took the language of analysis, reason and dispute, and stood it on its head".^[236]

Christopher Hitchens stated that the "stupid term – Islamophobia – has been put into circulation to try and suggest that a foul prejudice lurks behind any misgivings about Islam's infallible 'message'."^[237]

In his paper 'A Measure of Islamophobia' Salman Sayyid (2014) argues that these criticisms are a form of etymological fundamentalism and echo earlier comments on racism and anti-Semitism. Racism and anti-Semitism were also accused of blocking free speech, of being conceptually weak and too nebulous for practical purposes.^[238]

The Associated Press Stylebook

In December 2012, media sources reported that the terms "homophobia" and "Islamophobia" would no longer be included in the AP Stylebook, and Deputy Standards Editor Dave Minthorn expressed concern about the usage of the terms, describing them as "just off the mark" and saying that they seem "inaccurate". Minthorn stated that AP decided that the terms should not be used in articles with political or social contexts because they imply an understanding of the mental state of another individual. The terms no longer appears on the online stylebook, and Minthorn believes journalists should employ more precise phrases to avoid "ascribing a mental disability to someone".^{[239][240]}

Countering Islamophobia

Europe

On 26 September 2018, the European Parliament in Brussels launched the "Counter-Islamophobia Toolkit" (CIK), with the goal of combatting the growing Islamophobia across the EU and to be distributed to national governments and other policy makers, civil society and the media. Based on the most comprehensive research in Europe, it examines patterns of Islamophobia and effective strategies against it in eight member states. It lists ten dominant narratives and ten effective counter-narratives.^{[241][242][243]}

One of the authors of the CIK, Amina Easat-Daas, says that Muslim women are disproportionately affected by Islamophobia, based on both the "threat to the west" and "victims of...Islamic sexism" narratives. The approach taken in the CIK is a four-step one: defining the misinformed narratives based on flawed logic; documenting them; deconstructing these ideas to expose the flaws; and finally, reconstruction of mainstream ideas about Islam and Muslims, one closer to reality. The dominant ideas circulating in popular culture should reflect the diverse everyday experiences of Muslims and their faith.^[244]

See also

- Anti-Christian sentiment
 - Anti-Catholicism
 - Anti-Mormonism
 - Anti-Orthodoxy
 - Anti-Protestantism
- Discrimination against atheists
- Muslims Condemn
- Persecution of Bahá'ís
- Persecution of Jews
 - Anti-Judaism
 - Anti-Zionism
 - Antisemitism in Europe
 - Antisemitism in the Arab world
 - Islam and antisemitism
 - New antisemitism
 - Religious antisemitism
- Persecution of Muslims
 - Islamophobia in Australia
 - Islamophobia in Canada
 - Islamophobia in Germany
 - Islamophobia in Norway
 - Islamophobia in Sweden
 - Islamophobia in the United Kingdom
 - Islamophobia in the United States
 - Islamophobia in the media
 - Islamophobia Watch
 - Islamophobic incidents
- Religious intolerance
- Religious persecution
- Religious violence
- Religious war

References

Notes

1. "Islamophobia" (<https://en.oxforddictionaries.com/definition/islamophobia>). Oxford Dictionary. Retrieved 10 November 2016.
2. "islamophobia" (<https://www.dictionary.com/browse/islamophobia>). Dictionary.com Unabridged. Random House. Retrieved 10 November 2016.
3. "Islamophobia" (<http://www.collinsdictionary.com/dictionary/english/islamophobia>). Collins Dictionary. Retrieved 10 November 2016.
4. Miles & Brown 2003, p. 166.
5. See Egorova; Tudor (2003) pp. 2–3, which cites the conclusions of Marquina and Rebolledo in: "A. Marquina, V. G. Rebolledo, 'The Dialogue between the European Union and the Islamic World' in Interreligious Dialogues: Christians, Jews, Muslims, Annals of the European Academy of Sciences and Arts, v. 24, no. 10, Austria, 2000, pp. 166–68. "
6. Wiike, Richard; Stokes, Bruce; Simmons, Katie (July 2016). Europeans Fear Wave of Refugees Will Mean More Terrorism, Fewer Jobs (http ps://web.archive.org/web/20161127220309/http://assets.pewresearch.org/wp-content/uploads/sites/2/2016/07/Pew-Research-Center-EU-Refugees-and-National-Identity-Report-FINAL-July-11-2016.pdf) (PDF) (Report). Pew Research Center. p. 4. Archived from the original (http p://assets.pewresearch.org/wp-content/uploads/sites/2/2016/07/Pew-Research-Center-EU-Refugees-and-National-Identity-Report-FINAL-July-11-2016.pdf) (PDF) on 27 November 2016. Retrieved 27 November 2016.

7. Meer, Nasar; Modood, Tariq (July 2009). "Refutations of racism in the 'Muslim question'". Patterns of Prejudice. 43 (3–4): 335–54. doi:10.1080/00313220903109250 (<https://doi.org/10.1080%2F00313220903109250>).
8. Kaya, Ayhan (2014). "Islamophobia". In Cesari, Jocelyne (ed.). The Oxford Handbook of European Islam. Oxford University Press. ISBN 978-0-19-960797-6.
9. Carpente, Markus (2013). Diversity, Intercultural Encounters, and Education. p. 65.
10. Pande, Rekha (2012). Globalization, Technology Diffusion and Gender Disparity. p. 99.
11. Racism and Human Rights. p. 8, Raphael Walden – 2004
12. Muslims in Western Europe. p. 169, Jørgen S. Nielsen – 2004
13. Children's Voices: Studies of Interethnic Conflict and Violence in European schools (<https://books.google.com/books?id=CwuLAWAAQBAJ&printsec=frontcover#v=onepage&q=Islamophobia&f=false>), Mateja Sedmak, p124
14. Kuwara, Ibrahim (2004). Islam Nigeria-UK Road Tour. p. 6.
15. 2002, Fred halliday, Two hours that shook the world, p. 97
16. Kollontai, Pauline (2007). Community Identity: Dynamics of Religion in Context (https://books.google.com/books?id=Ff_TAWAAQBAJ&printsec=frontcover#v=onepage&q=Islamophobia&f=false). p. 254. ISBN 9780567031570.
17. Seid, Amine (2011). Islamic Terrorism and the Tangential Response of the West (<https://books.google.com/books?id=MHm89Dw8LOMC&printsec=frontcover#v=onepage&q&f=false>). p. 39. ISBN 9781467885676.
18. Goknar, Erdag (2013). Orhan Pamuk, Secularism and Blasphemy. p. 219.
19. Arasteh, Kamyar (2004). The American Reichstag. p. 94.
20. Dressler, Markus (2011). Secularism and Religion-Making. p. 250.
21. Kaim, Markus (2013). Great Powers and Regional Orders. p. 157.
22. 2013, Glen Perry, The International Relations of the Contemporary Middle East, p. 161
23. Toyin Falola – 2001, Violence in Nigeria: The Crisis of Religious Politics and Secular Ideologies (<https://books.google.com/books?id=4X4oYdPpXGQC&printsec=frontcover#v=onepage&q=%22Anti-Sufism%22&f=false>), p. 240, "Anti-Sufism itself is therefore a marker of identity, and the formation of the Izala proves this beyond any reasonable doubt".
24. Colonialism and Revolution in the Middle East, p. 197, Juan Ricardo Cole – 1999, "Ironically, the Sufi-phobia of the British consuls in the aftermath of 1857 led them to look in the wrong places for urban disturbances in the 1860s."
25. 2005, Ahmed Hashim, Insurgency and Counter-insurgency in Iraq, Cornell University Press (2006), ISBN 9780801444524
26. Roland Imhoff & Julia Recker (University of Bonn). "Differentiating Islamophobia: Introducing a new scale to measure Islamoprejudice and Secular Islam Critique" (https://uni-bonn.academia.edu/RolandImhoff/Papers/544018/Differentiating_Islamophobia_Introducing_a_new_scale_to_measure_Islamoprejudice_and_Secular_Islam_Critique). Retrieved 19 September 2013.
27. "Oxford English Dictionary: -phobia, comb. form" (<http://www.oed.com/view/Entry/142572?rskey=Glm8gY&result=2#eid>). Oxford University Press.(subscription required)
28. "Oxford English Dictionary: Islamophobia" (<http://www.oed.com/view/Entry/248449?>). Oxford University Press.(subscription required)
29. Islamophobia Research & Documentation Project. "Defining 'Islamophobia'" (<https://web.archive.org/web/20170309201925/http://crg.berkeley.edu/content/islamophobia/defining-islamophobia>). Center for Race & Gender, University of California at Berkeley. Archived from the original (<http://crg.berkeley.edu/content/islamophobia/defining-islamophobia>) on 9 March 2017. Retrieved 15 May 2018.
30. Encyclopedia of Race and Ethics, p. 215
31. Kandel, Johannes (August 2006). "Islamophobia – On the Career of a Controversial Term" (<https://web.archive.org/web/20170102082349/http://www.fes.de/BerlinerAkademiegespraeche/publikationen/islamundpolitik/documents/Islamophobia.pdf>) (PDF). Friedrich-Ebert-Stiftung. Archived from the original (<http://www.fes.de/BerlinerAkademiegespraeche/publikationen/islamundpolitik/documents/Islamophobia.pdf>) (PDF) on 2006.
32. Sayyid, Salman; Wakil, Abdoolkarim (2010). Thinking Through Islamophobia: Global Perspectives (<https://books.google.es/books?id=glHhHlaCm9AC>). New York: Columbia University Press. p. 319. ISBN 9780231702065.
33. "Runnymede Trust – Ranimed, Runnymede and a Long Report" (<http://www.runnymedetrust.org/bgRanimed.html>). Retrieved 18 March 2015.
34. Mcb.org.uk (http://www.mcb.org.uk/article_detail.php?article=announcement-862) Archived (https://web.archive.org/web/20120306001003/http://www.mcb.org.uk/article_detail.php?article=announcement-862) 6 March 2012 at the Wayback Machine
35. Richardson, Robin (December 2009). "Islamophobia or anti-muslim racism – or what?" (<http://www.insted.co.uk/anti-muslim-racism.pdf>) (PDF). (119 KB), Insted website. Accessed 30 December 2011.
36. Allen, Chris (2010). Islamophobia. Ashgate. p. 21. ISBN 978-0754651390.
37. Bleich, Erik (December 2011). "What Is Islamophobia and How Much Is There? Theorizing and Measuring an Emerging Comparative Concept" (<http://abs.sagepub.com/content/55/12/1581.abstract>). American Behavioral Scientist. 55 (12): 1581–1600. doi:10.1177/0002764211409387 (<https://doi.org/10.1177%2F0002764211409387>).
38. Cesari, Jocelyne (1 June 2006). "Muslims In Western Europe After 9/11: Why the term Islamophobia is more a predicament than an explanation" (http://www.euro-islam.info/wp-content/uploads/pdfs/securitization_and_religious_divides_in_europe.pdf) (PDF). (118 KB), Euro-Islam.Info: p. 5
39. Imhoff, Roland & Recker, Julia; Recker (December 2012). "Differentiating Islamophobia: Introducing a new scale to measure Islamoprejudice and Secular Islam Critique". Political Psychology. 33 (6): 811–24. doi:10.1111/j.1467-9221.2012.00911.x (<https://doi.org/10.1111%2Fj.1467-9221.2012.00911.x>).

40. Andrew Shryock, ed. (2010). Islamophobia/Islamophilia: Beyond the Politics of Enemy and Friend. Indiana University Press. p. 6. ISBN 978-0-253-22199-5.
41. Burak Erdenir (2010). Anna Triandafyllidou (ed.). Muslims in 21st Century Europe: Structural and Cultural Perspectives. Routledge. p. 28. ISBN 978-0415497091.
42. Bleich, Erik. "Defining and Researching Islamophobia". Review of Middle East Studies. 46 (2): 181.
43. "Islamofobi – definitioner och uttryck" (<http://www.levandehistoria.se/fakta-fordjupning/islamofobi/definitioner-och-uttryck>). Forum för levande historia. Retrieved 18 March 2015.
44. Corrina Balash Kerr (20 November 2007). "Faculty, Alumnus Discuss Concept of "Islamophobia" in Co-Authored Book" (<https://web.archive.org/web/20080820031422/http://www.wesleyan.edu/newsletter/campus/2007/1107islambook.html>). Wesleyan University Newsletter. Archived from the original (<http://www.wesleyan.edu/newsletter/campus/2007/1107islambook.html>) on 20 August 2008. Retrieved 29 December 2007.
45. "Images of Muslims: Discussing Islamophobia with Peter Gottschalk" (<https://web.archive.org/web/20071206034654/http://www.politicalaffairs.net/article/articleview/6181/1/296/>). Political Affairs. 19 November 2007. Archived from the original (<http://www.politicalaffairs.net/article/articleview/6181/1/296/>) on 6 December 2007. Retrieved 29 December 2007.
46. Lee, S. A.; Gibbons, J. A.; Thompson, J. M.; Timani, H. S. (2009). "The islamophobia scale: Instrument development and initial validation". International Journal for the Psychology of Religion. 19 (2): 92–105. doi:10.1080/10508610802711137 (<https://doi.org/10.1080%2F10508610802711137>).
47. Kunst, J. R.; Sam, D. L.; Ulleberg, P. (2012). "Perceived islamophobia: Scale development and validation". International Journal of Intercultural Relations. 37 (2): 225–37. doi:10.1016/j.ijintrel.2012.11.001 (<https://doi.org/10.1016%2Fj.ijintrel.2012.11.001>).
48. "The Multicultural State We're In: Muslims, 'Multiculture' and the 'Civic Re-balancing' of British Multiculturalism" (http://www.tariqmodood.com/uploads/1/2/3/9/12392325/multicultural_state_we_are_in.pdf). Political Studies: 2009 Vol 57, 473–97
49. Modood, Tariq (29 September 2005). "Remaking multiculturalism after 7/7" (<https://www.surrey.ac.uk/cronem/files/Tariq-Modood-article.pdf>) (PDF). "The most important such form of cultural racism today is anti-Muslim racism, sometimes called Islamophobia."
50. Nathan Lean (2012). The Islamophobia Industry: How the Right Manufactures Fear of Muslims. Pluto Press. ISBN 978-0745332543. "Biological racist discourses have now been replaced by what is called the 'new racism' or 'cultural racist' discourses"
51. Poynting, S.; Mason, V. (2007). "The resistible rise of Islamophobia: Anti-Muslim racism in the UK and Australia before 11 September 2001". Journal of Sociology. 43: 61–86. doi:10.1177/1440783307073935 (<https://doi.org/10.1177%2F1440783307073935>).
52. Erik Love (2013). "Review: beyond "post 9/11" (Islamophobia and the Politics of Empire by Deepa Kumar; Terrifying Muslims: Race and Labor in the South Asian Diaspora by Junaid Rana)". Contexts. 12 (1): 70–72. JSTOR 41960426 (<https://www.jstor.org/stable/41960426>). "Taking these two works together, Kumar and Rana put forth a strong argument that while Islam is certainly a religion, and not a race, and Muslims (like all religious communities) are a highly diverse group in terms of ethnicity, nationality, and even racial backgrounds, Islamophobia is in fact a form of racism. Both books effectively provide historical accounts showing the parallel development of Islamophobic discourses alongside other forms of racial bigotry and discrimination."
53. "Fascism fears: John Denham speaks out over clashes" (<https://web.archive.org/web/20110510093750/http://www.timesonline.co.uk/tol/news/uk/article6832035.ece>). 12 September 2009. Archived from the original (<http://www.timesonline.co.uk/tol/news/uk/article6832035.ece>) on 10 May 2011. Retrieved 18 March 2015.
54. Dan Nilsson-dan.nilsson@svd.se. "Reinfeldt: Kärnan i partiets idé" (http://www.svd.se/nyheter/inrikes/artikel_3674445.svd). SvD.se. Retrieved 18 March 2015.
55. Meer, Nasar; Noorani, Tehseen (May 2008). "A sociological comparison of anti-Semitism and anti-Muslim sentiment in Britain" (http://www.nasarmeer.com/uploads/7/7/4/6/7746984/meer_and_noorani_-_the_sociological_review.pdf) (PDF). The Sociological Review. 56 (2): 195–219. doi:10.1111/j.1467-954X.2008.00784.x (<https://doi.org/10.1111%2Fj.1467-954X.2008.00784.x>). "Across Europe activists and certain academics are struggling to get across an understanding in their governments and their countries at large that anti-Muslim racism/Islamophobia is now one of the most pernicious forms of contemporary racism and that steps should be taken to combat it."
56. Anti-Semitism and Islamophobia – new enemies, old patterns (<http://rac.sagepub.com/content/52/3/77.short>)
57. Jocelyne Cesari "Muslims In Western Europe After 9/11: Why the term Islamophobia is more a predicament than an explanation" (http://www.euro-islam.info/wp-content/uploads/pdfs/securitization_and_religious_divides_in_europe.pdf) Submission to the Changing Landscape of Citizenship and Security: 6th PCRD of European Commission. 1 June 2006: p. 6
58. John L. Esposito, ed. (2011). Islamophobia: The Challenge of Pluralism in the 21st Century. Oxford University Press. p. 21. ISBN 978-0199753642.
59. Anna Triandafyllidou, ed. (2010). Muslims in 21st Century Europe: Structural and Cultural Perspectives. Routledge. p. 28. ISBN 978-0415497091.
60. Andrew Shryock, ed. (2010). Islamophobia/Islamophilia: Beyond the Politics of Enemy and Friend. Indiana University Press. pp. 6–25. ISBN 978-0253221995.
61. Frost, D. (2008). "Islamophobia: Examining causal links between the media and "race hate" from "below" ". International Journal of Sociology and Social Policy. 28 (11/12): 564–78. doi:10.1108/01443330810915251 (<https://doi.org/10.1108%2F01443330810915251>).
62. Islamofobi – en studie av begreppet, ungdomars attityder och unga muslimers utsatthet (<http://www.levandehistoria.se/files/islamofobi.pdf>) Archived (<https://web.archive.org/web/20120119025153/http://www.levandehistoria.se/files/islamofobi.pdf>) 19 January 2012 at the Wayback Machine, published by Forum för levande historia
The rise of anti-Muslim racism in Australia: who benefits? (<http://hdl.handle.net/1885/45034>)
Poynting; Mason (2006). "Tolerance, Freedom, Justice and Peace?: Britain, Australia and Anti-Muslim Racism since 11 September 2001". Journal of Intercultural Studies. 27 (4): 365–91. doi:10.1080/07256860600934973 (<https://doi.org/10.1080%2F07256860600934973>).

63. Alan Johnson (6 March 2011). "The Idea of 'Islamophobia'" (<http://www.worldaffairsjournal.org/blog/alan-johnson/idea-'islamophobia'>). World Affairs.
64. Hussain, Yasmin & Bagguley, Paul (November 2012). "Securitized Citizens: Islamophobia, Racism and the 7/7 London Bombings" (<http://prints.whiterose.ac.uk/80516/2/securedcitizens4socrevfinal280512%5B1%5D.pdf>) (PDF). The Sociological Review. 60 (4): 715–734. doi:10.1111/j.1467-954X.2012.02130.x (<https://doi.org/10.1111%2Fj.1467-954X.2012.02130.x>).
65. Aldridge, Alan (1 February 2000). Religion in the Contemporary World: A Sociological Introduction. Polity Press. p. 138. ISBN 978-0-7456-2083-1.
66. Miles & Brown 2003, p. 165.
67. Poole 2003, p. 219.
68. Bleich, Erik (2011). "What Is Islamophobia and How Much Is There? Theorizing and Measuring an Emerging Comparative Concept" (<http://abs.sagepub.com/content/55/12/1581.abstract>). American Behavioral Scientist. 55 (12): 1581–1600. doi:10.1177/0002764211409387 (<https://doi.org/10.1177%2F0002764211409387>).
69. Imhoff, Roland & Recker, Julia "Differentiating Islamophobia: Introducing a new scale to measure Islamoprejudice and Secular Islam Critique" (https://uni-bonn.academia.edu/RolandImhoff/Papers/544018/Differentiating_Islamophobia_Introducing_a_new_scale_to_measure_Islamoprejudice_and_Secular_Islam_Critique) Journal of Political Psychology
70. Van Der Noll, Jolanda; Saroglou, Vassilis; Latour, David; Dolezal, Nathalie (2018). "Western Anti-Muslim Prejudice: Value Conflict or Discrimination of Persons Too?". Political Psychology. 39 (2): 281–301. doi:10.1111/pops.12416 (<https://doi.org/10.1111%2Fpops.12416>).
71. Dinet, Alphonse Étienne; ben Ibrahim, Sliman (1918). La Vie de Mohammed, Prophète d'Allah. Paris. cited from Otterbeck, Jonas; Bevelander, Pieter (2006). Islamofobi – en studie av begreppet, ungdomars attityder och unga muslimars utsatthet (<https://web.archive.org/web/20120119025153/http://www.levandehistoria.se/files/islamofobi.pdf>) (PDF) (in Swedish). Anders Lange. Stockholm: Forum för levande historia. ISBN 978-91-976073-6-0. Archived from the original (<http://www.levandehistoria.se/files/islamofobi.pdf>) (PDF) on 19 January 2012. Retrieved 23 November 2011. "modern orientalists [are partially] influenced by an islamofobia, which is poorly reconciled with science and hardly worthy of our time"
72. Allen, Christopher (2010). Islamophobia. Ashgate Publishing. pp. 5–6.
73. Ezzerhouni, Dahou. "L'islamophobie, un racisme apparu avec les colonisations" (<http://www.algerie-focus.com/2010/02/03/lislamophobie-un-racisme-apparu-avec-les-colonisations/>), Algerie-Focus, 3 February 2010. "Le mot serai ainsi apparu pour la première fois dans quelques ouvrages du début du XXème siècle. On peut citer entre autre « La politique musulmane dans l'Afrique Occidentale Française » d'Alain Quellien publié en 1910, suivi de quelques citations dans la Revue du Monde Musulman en 1912 et 1918, la Revue du Mercure de France en 1912, « Haut-Sénégal-Niger » de Maurice Delafosse en 1912 et dans le Journal of Theological Studies en 1924. L'année suivante, Etienne Dinet et Slimane Ben Brahim, employaient ce terme qui « conduit à l'aberration » dans leur ouvrage « L'Orient vu par l'Occident »."
74. Chris Allen (2007). "Islamophobia and its Consequences" (<http://www.isn.ethz.ch/isn/Digital-Library/Publications/Detail/?ots591=0c54e3b3-1e9c-be1e-2c24-a6a8c7060233&lng=en&id=45668>). European Islam: 144–67.
75. Bravo López, F. (2011). "Towards a definition of Islamophobia: Approximations of the early twentieth century". Ethnic and Racial Studies. 34 (4): 556–73. doi:10.1080/01419870.2010.528440 (<https://doi.org/10.1080%2F01419870.2010.528440>).
76. Otterbeck, Jonas; Bevelander, Pieter (2006). Islamofobi – en studie av begreppet, ungdomars attityder och unga muslimars utsatthet (<https://web.archive.org/web/20120119025153/http://www.levandehistoria.se/files/islamofobi.pdf>) (PDF) (in Swedish). Anders Lange. Stockholm: Forum för levande historia. ISBN 978-91-976073-6-0. Archived from the original (<http://www.levandehistoria.se/files/islamofobi.pdf>) (PDF) on 19 January 2012. Retrieved 23 November 2011
77. Annan, Kofi. "Secretary-General, addressing headquarters seminar Wed Confronting Islamophobia" (<https://www.un.org/News/Press/docs/2004/sgsm9637.doc.htm>), United Nations, press release, 7 December 2004.
78. "Islamophobia: A Challenge for Us All" (<http://www.runnymedetrust.org/uploads/publications/pdfs/islamophobia.pdf>) (PDF). (69.7 KB), Runnymede Trust, 1997.
79. Benn & Jawad 2003, p. 162.
80. Benn & Jawad 2003, p. 165.
81. Døving, Cora Alexa (2010). "Anti-Semitism and Islamophobia: A Comparison of Imposed Group Identities" (<http://islamforskning.dk/files/journal/2010/FIFO-2010-2-del4.pdf>) (PDF). Tidsskrift for Islamforskning. 4 (2): 52–76. doi:10.7146/tifo.v4i2.24596 (<https://doi.org/10.7146%2Ftifo.v4i2.24596>). Retrieved 23 November 2011.
82. Bhandar, D. (2010). "Cultural politics: Disciplining citizenship". Citizenship Studies. 14 (3): 331–43. doi:10.1080/13621021003731963 (<https://doi.org/10.1080%2F13621021003731963>).
83. Poole 2003, p. 216.
84. Miles & Brown 2003, p. 163.
85. Miles & Brown 2003, p. 164.
86. Saunders, Doug (18 September 2012). "Catholics Then, Muslims Now" (<https://www.nytimes.com/2012/09/18/opinion/catholics-then-muslims-now.html>). The New York Times. Retrieved 18 February 2014.
87. Haddad 2002, p. 19.
88. Fredman, Sandra (2001). Discrimination and human rights: the case of racism. Oxford [Oxfordshire]: Oxford University Press. p. 121. ISBN 978-0-19-924603-8.
89. Islamophobia: A Challenge for Us All, Runnymede Trust, 1997, p. 1, cited in Quraishi, Muzammil (2005). Muslims and crime: a comparative study. Aldershot, Hants, England: Ashgate Publishing. p. 60. ISBN 978-0-7546-4233-6.
90. Holden, Cathie; Hicks, David V. (2007). Teaching the global dimension: key principles and effective practice. New York: Routledge. p. 140. ISBN 978-0-415-40448-8.

91. Mepschen, P.; Duyvendak, J. W.; Tonkens, E. H. (2010). "Sexual Politics, Orientalism and Multicultural Citizenship in the Netherlands". Sociology. 44 (5): 962–79. doi:10.1177/0038038510375740 (<https://doi.org/10.1177%2F0038038510375740>).
92. Ho, Christina (July – August 2007). "Muslim women's new defenders: Women's rights, nationalism and Islamophobia in contemporary Australia". Women's Studies International Forum. 30 (4): 290–98. doi:10.1016/j.wsif.2007.05.002 (<https://doi.org/10.1016%2Fj.wsif.2007.05.002>). hdl:10453/3255 (<https://hdl.handle.net/10453%2F3255>).
93. Salaita, Steven (Fall 2006). "Beyond Orientalism and Islamophobia: 9/11, Anti-Arab Racism, and the Mythos of National Pride" (<https://mus.e.jhu.edu/article/209750/summary>). CR: The New Centennial Review. 6 (2). Retrieved 20 November 2015.
94. Bunzl, Matti (2007). Anti-semitism and Islamophobia: hatreds old and new in Europe (https://books.google.com/books?id=37UsAQAAIAAJ&q=%22Islamophobic+claims%22#search_anchor). Chicago: Prickly Paradigm Press. p. 13. ISBN 978-0-9761475-8-9. Retrieved 23 November 2011.
95. Benbassa, Esther (2007). "Xenophobia, Anti-Semitism, and Racism" (<http://www.estherbenbassa.net/SCANS/XENOPHOBIA.PDF>) (PDF). In Bunzl, Matti (ed.). Anti-Semitism and Islamophobia: Hatred Old and New in Europe. Chicago: Prickly Paradigm Press. pp. 86ff. ISBN 978-0-9761475-8-9. Retrieved 23 November 2011.
96. Schiffer, S.; Wagner, C. (2011). "Anti-Semitism and Islamophobia – new enemies, old patterns". Race & Class. 52 (3): 77–84. doi:10.1177/0306396810389927 (<https://doi.org/10.1177%2F0306396810389927>).
97. Williams, Soydan & Johnson 1998, p. 182.
98. Williams, Soydan & Johnson 1998, p. 22.
99. Edward W. Said, 'Orientalism Reconsidered' in Francis Barker, Peter Hulme, Margaret Iversen, Diana Loxley (eds), Literature, Politics, and Theory, Methuen & Co, London 1986 pp. 210229, pp. 220ff.
100. Bryan Stanley Turner, introd. to Bryan S. Turner (ed.) Orientalism: Early Sources, (Vol 1, Readings in Orientalism), Routledge, London (2000) reprint 2002 p. 12
101. The resistible rise of Islamophobia – Anti-Muslim racism in the UK and Australia before 11 September 2001 (<http://jos.sagepub.com/content/43/1/61.abstract>), Journal of Sociology March 2007 vol. 43 no. 1 61–86
102. Contemporary racism and Islamophobia in Australia – Racializing religion (https://www.ssoar.info/ssoar/bitstream/handle/document/23061/ssoar-ethnicities-2007-4-dunn_et_al-contemporary_racism_and_islamaphobia_in.pdf?sequence=1), Ethnicities December 2007 vol. 7 no. 4 564–589
103. Mark Townsend (14 April 2012). "Far-right anti-Muslim network on rise globally as Breivik trial opens" (<https://www.theguardian.com/world/2012/apr/14/breivik-trial-norway-mass-murderer>). guardian.co.uk. London. Retrieved 15 April 2012.
104. "Islamophobia: The new anti-Semitism" (<https://www.thestar.com/news/insight/article/1055298--islamophobia-the-new-anti-semitism>). The Star. Toronto.
105. "American Muslim Poll 2018: Full Report | ISPU" (<https://www.ispu.org/american-muslim-poll-2018-full-report/>). Institute for Social Policy and Understanding. 30 April 2018. Retrieved 5 December 2018.
106. Mohamed Nimer (2011). John L. Esposito (ed.). Islamophobia: The Challenge of Pluralism in the 21st Century. Oxford University Press. p. 76. ISBN 978-0199753642.
107. Gabriele Marranci: "Multiculturalism, Islam and the clash of civilisations theory: rethinking Islamophobia", Culture and Religion: An Interdisciplinary Journal, Vol. 5, No. 1 (2004), pp. 105–17 (116f.)
108. Poole 2003, p. 217.
109. Richardson, John E. (2004). (Mis)representing Islam: the racism and rhetoric of British broadsheet newspapers (<https://books.google.com/?id=WanqIF2XULsC&printsec=frontcover#v=onepage&q=>). John Benjamins Publishing Company. ISBN 978-90-272-2699-0.
110. Richardson, J. E. (2009). "'Get Shot of the Lot of Them': Election Reporting of Muslims in British Newspapers". Patterns of Prejudice. 43 (3–4): 355–77. doi:10.1080/00313220903109276 (<https://doi.org/10.1080%2F00313220903109276>).
111. Mehdi Hasan (9 July 2009). "Know your enemy" (<http://www.newstatesman.com/2009/07/mehdi-hasan-muslim-terrorism-white-british>). New Statesman. Retrieved 9 April 2010.
112. Obituary of Oriana Fallaci (<https://www.theguardian.com/italy/story/0,1873911,00.html>) – The Guardian, 16 September 2006. "Controversial Italian journalist famed for her interviews and war reports but notorious for her Islamaphobia"
113. "Equal Treatment? Measuring the Legal and Media Responses to Ideologically Motivated Violence in the US" (<https://www.imv-report.org/>). The Institute for Social Policy and Understanding. Retrieved 5 December 2018.
114. Lean, Nathan (2012). The Islamophobia Industry: How the Right Manufactures Fear of Muslims. Pluto Press. p. 66.
115. Kaminski, Joseph (2014). "The Islamophobia Industry, Hate, and Its Impact on Muslim Immigrants and OIC State Development". Islamophobia Studies Journal. 2 (2): 157–176. doi:10.13169/islstudj.2.2.0157 (<https://doi.org/10.13169%2Fislstudj.2.2.0157>).
116. Bazian, Hatem (21 December 2015). "The Islamophobia Industry and the Demonization of Palestine: Implications for American Studies" (<https://muse.jhu.edu/article/605051/summary>). American Quarterly. 67 (4): 1057–1066. doi:10.1353/aq.2015.0073 (<https://doi.org/10.1353%2Faq.2015.0073>). ISSN 1080-6490 (<https://www.worldcat.org/issn/1080-6490>).
117. Stein, Arlene; Salime, Zakia (1 February 2015). "Manufacturing Islamophobia: Rightwing Pseudo-Documentaries and the Paranoid Style" (<https://www.researchgate.net/publication/271907367>). Journal of Communication Inquiry. 281 (4): 2015–1. doi:10.1177/0196859915569385 (<https://doi.org/10.1177%2F0196859915569385>).
118. Shipoli, Erdoan A. (2018). Islam, Securitization, and US Foreign Policy (<https://books.google.com/books?id=rE5aDwAAQBAJ&pg=PA116>). Springer. p. 116. ISBN 9783319711119.
119. Steve Rendall and Isabel Macdonald, Making Islamophobia Mainstream; How Muslim-bashers broadcast their bigotry (<http://www.fair.org/in dex.php?page=3648>), summary of Fairness and Accuracy in Reporting report, at its website, November/December 2008.

120. Encyclopedia of Race and Ethnic studies, p. 218
121. "OIC will launch channel to counter Islamophobia" (<http://www.arabnews.com/node/411340>). Arab News. 19 April 2012. Retrieved 9 January 2013.
122. Gabriel, Karen, "The Country in the City: The Bye-lanes of Identity", South Asian Journal Special Issue Cinema in South Asia, July – September 2010 pp. 53–64.
123. Gabriel, Karen and P. K. Vijayan, "Orientalism, Terrorism and Bombay Cinema", (2012) Journal of Postcolonial Writing Special Issue on Orientalism and Terrorism, Pavan Kumar Malreddy & Birte Heidemann (eds.) July 2012 volume 48, number 3, pp. 299–310.
124. "Funding fear of Muslims: $206m went to promoting 'hatred', report finds" (<https://www.theguardian.com/us-news/2016/jun/20/islamophobia-funding-cair-berkeley-report>). The Guardian. 20 June 2016.
125. Anti-Defamation League, "Backgrounder: Stop Islamization of America (SIOA)" (http://www.adl.org/main_Extremism/sioa.htm) Archived (https://web.archive.org/web/20120502054200/http://www.adl.org/main_Extremism/sioa.htm) 2 May 2012 at the Wayback Machine, Extremism, 25 March 2011 [26 August 2010]. Retrieved 16 February 2012.
126. Steinback, Robert (Summer 2011). "Jihad Against Islam" (<http://www.spicenter.org/get-informed/intelligence-report/browse-all-issues/2011/summer/jihad-against-islam>). The Intelligence Report (142). Southern Poverty Law Center.
127. "Pamela Geller & Stop Islamization of America" (<http://www.spicenter.org/get-informed/intelligence-files/profiles/pamela-geller>). Southern Poverty Law Center. Retrieved 27 June 2011.
128. Siemaszko, Corky (25 February 2011). "Southern Poverty Law Center lists anti-Islamic NYC blogger Pamela Geller, followers a hate group" (http://articles.nydailynews.com/2011-02-25/local/28647400_1_islamic-center-anti-islamic-pamela-geller). New York Daily News.
129. *Anti-Islamic ad claiming "it's not Islamophobia, it's Islamorealism" goes up in NY train stations (http://www.cbsnews.com/8301-201_162-57495509/anti-islamic-ad-claiming-its-not-islamophobia-its-islamorealism-goes-up-in-ny-train-stations/), Associated Press, 17 August 2012. Note that Bryan Fischer, Director of Issues Analysis for the American Family Association also used the phrase "Islam-realism" in the column Times Square another argument for restricting Muslim immigration (<http://www.renewamerica.com/columns/fischer/100504>), 4 May 2010.
130. "Free-speech free-for-all" (http://www.nypost.com/p/news/opinion/editorials/free_speech_free_for_all_SJ7F1HEiw0fquldzjaHkPO). New York Post. 6 October 2012.
131. Ashwaq Masood (4 October 2012). "Pro-Muslim Subway Ads to Hang Near Anti-Jihad Ads" (<http://cityroom.blogs.nytimes.com/2012/10/04/pro-muslim-subway-ads-to-hang-near-anti-jihad-ads/>). The New York Times.
132. Jewish Council for Public Affairs. "JCPA Condemns Bigoted, Divisive, and Unhelpful Anti-Muslim Ads" (http://engage.jewishpublicaffairs.org/blog/comments.jsp?key=477&blog_entry_KEY=6561&t=). JCPA. Retrieved 21 September 2012.
133. "A shocking assumption" (http://www.nypost.com/p/news/opinion/editorials/shocking_assumption_gwMiupSSPR0d6waO4IVt6J). The New York Post. 29 September 2012.
134. "The Quranic Arabic Corpus – Translation" (<http://corpus.quran.com/translation.jsp?chapter=3&verse=151>).
135. New anti-Muslim ads up in NYC subway stations (http://www.cbsnews.com/8301-201_162-57562947/new-anti-muslim-ads-up-in-nyc-subway-stations/), CBS News, 9 January 2013.
136. Emily Anne Epstein, New Anti-Islam Ads to Debut This Month, Now With 25% More MTA Disclaimer (<http://observer.com/2012/12/pamela-geller-mta-new-anti-islam-ads-to-debut-this-month-now-with-25-more-mta-disclaimer/>), The New York Observer, 7 December 2012.
137. Matt Flegenheimer (13 December 2012). "Controversial Group Plans More Ads in Subway Stations" (https://www.nytimes.com/2012/12/14/nyregion/controversial-group-has-new-anti-jihad-subway-ads.html?ref=nyregion&_r=1&). New York Times.
138. Murtaza Hussain, Anti-Muslim violence spiraling out of control in America (<http://www.aljazeera.com/indepth/opinion/2012/12/20121230135815198642.html>), Al-Jazeera, 31 December 2012.
139. Wajahat Ali, Death by brown skin (http://www.salon.com/2012/12/31/death_by_brown_skin/), Salon, 31 December 2012.
140. Roland Imhoff. "Differentiating Islamophobia: Introducing a new scale to measure Islamoprejudice and Secular Islam Critique" (<https://www.academia.edu/545302>). Retrieved 18 March 2015.
141. Haroon Siddique (8 October 2013). "Tommy Robinson quits EDL saying it has become 'too extreme'" (<https://www.theguardian.com/uk-news/2013/oct/08/tommy-robinson-english-defence-league>). The Guardian.
142. Lavalette, Michael (2014). "Institutionalised Islamophobia and the 'Prevent' agenda: 'winning hearts and minds' or welfare as surveillance and control?". Race, Racism and Social Work: Contemporary issues and debates. England: Policy Press at the University of Bristol. pp. 167–90.
143. Benn & Jawad 2003, p. 111.
144. Steven Vertovec, "Islamophobia and Muslim Recognition in Britain"
145. Haddad 2002, p. 32.
146. Haddad 2002, p. 33.
147. Naina Patel, Beth Humphries and Don Naik, "The 3 Rs in social work; Religion, 'race' and racism in Europe"
148. Williams, Soydan & Johnson 1998, p. 197.
149. Williams, Soydan & Johnson 1998, p. 198.
150. Imam Abduljalil Sajid. "Islamophobia: A new word for an old fear" (<http://www.wcrp.be/articles/Sajid9-11-04.htm>). Retrieved 17 August 2007.
151. "The next holocaust" (<http://www.newstatesman.com/node/152128>), New Statesman, 5 December 2005.
152. Malik, Kenan. From Fatwa to Jihad. Atlantic Books, London (2009): pp. 131–32.
153. Malik (2009): p. 132

182. Bona, Marzia (2 August 2018). "How widespread is anti-Roma prejudice?" (<https://www.europeandatajournalism.eu/eng/News/Data-news/How-widespread-is-anti-Roma-prejudice>). OBC Transeuropa/EDJNet. Retrieved 29 August 2018.
183. "EUMC presents reports on Discrimination and Islamophobia in the EU" (https://web.archive.org/web/20080131230905/http://www.eumc.europa.eu/eumc/index.php?fuseaction=content.dsp_cat_content&catid=43d8bc25bc89d&contentid=4582ddc822d41). "European Monitoring Centre on Racism and Xenophobia media release". 18 December 2006. Archived from the original (http://www.eumc.europa.eu/eumc/index.php?fuseaction=content.dsp_cat_content&catid=43d8bc25bc89d&contentid=4582ddc822d41) on 31 January 2008.
184. Allen, Chris and Nielsen, Jorgen S. "Summary report on Islamophobia in the EU after 11 September 2001" (<http://www.raxen.eumc.eu.int/1/webmill.php?id=32813&ditem=3101&lin=detail>) Archived (<https://web.archive.org/web/20071112213546/http://www.raxen.eumc.eu.int/1/webmill.php?id=32813&ditem=3101&lin=detail>) 12 November 2007 at the Wayback Machine, EUMC, May 2002.
185. EUMC website – Publications (http://fra.europa.eu/fra/index.php?fuseaction=content.dsp_cat_content&catid=1) Archived (https://web.archive.org/web/20071223010504/http://fra.europa.eu/fra/index.php?fuseaction=content.dsp_cat_content&catid=1) 23 December 2007 at the Wayback Machine. Retrieved 17 November 2007.
186. Roald, Anne Sophie (2004). New Muslims in the European Context: The Experience of Scandinavian Converts. Brill. p. 53. ISBN 978-90-04-13679-3.
187. Fasena.de (<http://www.fasena.de/download/rechts/SIFCI.pdf>)
188. "Conference Two: Combating Intolerance" (https://web.archive.org/web/20100923211418/http://www.humanrights.gov.se/stockholmforum/2001/conference_2001.html). Chancellery of the Government of Sweden. Archived from the original (http://www.humanrights.gov.se/stockholmforum/2001/conference_2001.html) on 23 September 2010. Retrieved 19 November 2011.
189. "OIC warns of exploiting Islamophobia phenomenon" (<http://www.arabnews.com/oic-warns-exploiting-islamophobia-phenomenon>). Arab News. 13 November 2012. Retrieved 18 October 2013.
190. Terminologi – islamofobi (<http://motargument.se/2014/02/23/terminologi-islamofobi/>) "rasistiska och diskriminerande uttryck gentemot muslimer."
191. "Reports – European Islamophobia" (<http://www.islamophobiaeurope.com/reports/2015-reports/>) (.html/.pdf). European Islamophobia Reports EIR (2015). 3 May 2016. Retrieved 18 May 2016.
192. "EIR_2015.pdf" (http://www.islamophobiaeurope.com/reports/2015/en/EIR_2015.pdf) (.pdf). European Islamophobia Reports EIR (2015). 3 May 2016. Retrieved 18 May 2016.
193. Feroz, Emran (4 May 2016). "Europe's First Report on Islamophobia Shows the Dangerous Climate Muslims Live In" (<http://www.alternet.org/grayzone-project/europes-first-report-islamophobia-shows-dangerous-climate-muslims-live>). AlterNet. Retrieved 13 May 2016.
194. "Definition – About European Islamophobia Report (EIR)" (<http://www.islamophobiaeurope.com/about-us/>) (.html). ©2016 European Islamophobia. European Parliament. 3 May 2016. Retrieved 12 May 2016. "When talking about Islamophobia, we mean anti-Muslim racism. As Anti-Semitism Studies has shown, the etymological components of a word do not necessarily point to its complete meaning, nor how it is used. Such is also the case with Islamophobia Studies. Islamophobia has become a well known term used in academia as much as in the public sphere. Criticism of Muslims or of the Islamic religion is not necessarily Islamophobic. Islamophobia is about a dominant group of people aiming at seizing, stabilizing and widening their power by means of defining a scapegoat – real or invented – and excluding this scapegoat from the resources/rights/definition of a constructed 'we'. Islamophobia operates by constructing a static 'Muslim' identity, which is attributed in negative terms and generalized for all Muslims. At the same time, Islamophobic images are fluid and vary in different contexts, because Islamophobia tells us more about the Islamophobe than it tells us about the Muslims/Islam."
195. Ricci, Alexander Damiano (11 February 2019). "Negative attitude towards Muslims inversely proportional to actual presence" (<https://www.europeandatajournalism.eu/eng/News/Data-news/Negative-attitude-towards-Muslims-inversely-proportional-to-actual-presence>). VoxEurop/EDJNet. Retrieved 4 March 2019.
196. Spruyt, B.; Elchardus, M. (2012). "Are anti-Muslim feelings more widespread than anti-foreigner feelings? Evidence from two split-sample experiments". Ethnicities. 12 (6): 800–20. doi:10.1177/1468796812449707 (<https://doi.org/10.1177%2F1468796812449707>).
197. González, K. V.; Verkuyten, M.; Weesie, J.; Poppe, E. (2008). "Prejudice Towards Muslims in The Netherlands: Testing Integrated Threat Theory". The British Journal of Social Psychology. 47 (4): 667–85. doi:10.1348/014466608X28444 (<https://doi.org/10.1348%2F014466608X28444>) (inactive 11 February 2019).
198. Savelkoul, M.; Scheepers, P.; Tolsma, J.; Hagendoorn, L. (2010). "Anti-Muslim attitudes in the Netherlands: Tests of contradictory hypotheses derived from ethnic competition theory and intergroup contact theory". European Sociological Review. 27 (6): 741–58. doi:10.1093/esr/jcq035 (<https://doi.org/10.1093%2Fesr%2Fjq035>). hdl:2066/99505 (<https://hdl.handle.net/2066%2F99505>).
199. Schlueter, E.; Scheepers, P. (2010). "The relationship between outgroup size and anti-outgroup attitudes: A theoretical synthesis and empirical test of group threat- and intergroup contact theory". Social Science Research. 39 (2): 285–95. doi:10.1016/j.ssresearch.2009.07.006 (<https://doi.org/10.1016%2Fj.ssresearch.2009.07.006>).
200. Kunst, J. R.; Tajamal, H.; Sam, D. L.; Ulleberg, P. (2012). "Coping with Islamophobia: The effects of religious stigma on Muslim minorities' identity formation". International Journal of Intercultural Relations. 36 (4): 518–32. doi:10.1016/j.ijintrel.2011.12.014 (<https://doi.org/10.1016%2Fj.ijintrel.2011.12.014>).
201. Verkuyten, M.; Yildiz, A. A. (2007). "National (dis)identification and ethnic and religious identity: A study among Turkish-Dutch Muslims". Personality and Social Psychology Bulletin. 33 (10): 1448–62. doi:10.1177/0146167207304276 (<https://doi.org/10.1177%2F0146167207304276>). PMID 17933739 (<https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pubmed/17933739>).
202. Johnston, D.; Lordan, G. (2011). "Discrimination makes me sick! An examination of the discrimination–health relationship". Journal of Health Economics. 31 (1): 99–111. doi:10.1016/j.jhealeco.2011.12.002 (<https://doi.org/10.1016%2Fj.jhealeco.2011.12.002>). PMID 22366167 (<https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pubmed/22366167>).
203. "European Islamophobia" (<http://www.islamophobiaeurope.com>).
204. Hafez, Farid. "Jahrbuch für Islamophobieforschung" (<http://www.jahrbuch-islamophobie.de>). Islamophobieforschung.

205. "Wahhabism expansion in Russia leads to growth of Islamophobia – National Anti-Terrorist Committee" (http://rbth.ru/news/2013/06/25/wahhabism_expansion_in_russia_leads_to_growth_of_islamophobia_-_national_27468.html). Rossiyskaya Gazeta. 25 June 2013.
206. Daniel Kalder (8 October 2013). "Russian court bans Qur'an translation" (<https://www.theguardian.com/books/booksblog/2013/oct/08/russian-court-bans-quran-translation>). Guardian.
207. Husna Haq (9 October 2013). "Russia blacklists translation of the Quran" (<http://www.csmonitor.com/Books/chapter-and-verse/2013/1009/Russia-blacklists-translation-of-the-Quran>). Christian Science Monitor.
208. "No change for the better: Georgia appears to have moved backwards under Bidzina Ivanishvili" (<https://www.economist.com/news/europe/21587829-georgia-appears-have-moved-backwards-under-bidzina-ivanishvili-no-change-better>). The Economist. 12 October 2013.
209. "Rising tide of Islamophobia engulfs Athens" (<https://www.theglobeandmail.com/news/world/rising-tide-of-islamophobia-engulfs-athens/article560119/>). Globe and Mail. Toronto. 3 January 2011.
210. Ben McPartland (15 February 2013). "Islamophobia has been trivialized in France" (<http://www.thelocal.fr/20130215/islamophobia-has-become-trivialised-in-france>). The Local.
211. "Muslims In Western Europe After 9/11: Why the term Islamophobia is more a predicament than an explanation" (http://www.euro-islam.info/wp-content/uploads/pdfs/securitization_and_religious_divides_in_europe.pdf) (PDF).
212. Mason, Rowena. "Nigel Farage: Indian and Australian immigrants better than eastern Europeans" (<https://web.archive.org/web/20150424083806/https://www.theguardian.com/politics/2015/apr/22/nigel-farage-immigrants-india-australia-better-than-eastern-Europeans>). The Guardian. Archived from the original (<https://www.theguardian.com/politics/2015/apr/22/nigel-farage-immigrants-india-australia-better-than-eastern-Europeans>) on 24 April 2015.
213. "New report exposes huge rise in racist crime in Europe" (<http://europe.newsweek.com/new-report-exposes-huge-rise-racist-crime-europe-326929>).
214. Islamophobia, social distance and fear of terrorism in Australia: a preliminary report (http://www.unisa.edu.au/Global/EASS/MnM/Publications/Islamophobia_report.pdf)
215. Poole 2003, p. 218, The Runnymede Trust has been successful in that the term Islamophobia is now widely recognized and used, though many right-wing commentators reject its existence or argue that it is justified. However, now becoming a catch-all label for any harassment involving Muslims, it should not be considered unproblematic.
216. Jocelyne Cesari (15–16 December 2006). "Muslims in Western Europe After 9/11: Why the term Islamophobia is more a predicament than an explanation" (http://www.euro-islam.info/wp-content/uploads/pdfs/securitization_and_religious_divides_in_europe.pdf) (PDF).
217. Moten, Abdul Rashid (2014). "Islamophobia". In Shahin, Emad El-Din (ed.). The Oxford Encyclopedia of Islam and Politics. Volume 1. Oxford University Press. pp. 618–620. ISBN 978-0-19-973935-6.
218. John Scott, ed. (2014). "Islamophobia" (<http://www.oxfordreference.com/view/10.1093/acref/9780199683581.001.0001/acref-9780199683581-e-2536>). A Dictionary of Sociology (4th ed.). Oxford University Press.
219. Chris Allen (2009). "Islamophobia" (<http://www.oxfordreference.com/view/10.1093/acref/9780195305135.001.0001/acref-9780195305135-e-1178>). In John L. Esposito (ed.). The Oxford Encyclopedia of the Islamic World. Oxford: Oxford University Press.
220. Jackson, Paul (2001). The EDL: Britain's 'New Far Right' Social Movement (<http://nectar.northampton.ac.uk/6015/7/Jackson20116015.pdf>) (PDF). RMN Publications, University of Northampton. pp. 10–11. Retrieved 28 June 2012.
221. "Eli Göndör: Begreppet islamofobi bör bytas ut" (<http://www.corren.se/asikter/kolumner/eli-gondor-begreppet-islamofobi-bor-bytas-ut-6394258-artikel.aspx>). Retrieved 18 March 2015.
222. Bunzl 2007, Bravo Lopéz 2009
223. Tamdgidi, Mohammad H. (2012). "Beyond Islamophobia and Islamophilia as Western Epistemic Racisms: Revisiting Runnymede Trust's Definition in a World-History Context" (<https://web.archive.org/web/20131029212606/http://crg.berkeley.edu/sites/default/files/Tamdgidi.pdf>) (PDF). Islamophobia Studies Journal. 1 (1): 76. Archived from the original (<http://crg.berkeley.edu/sites/default/files/Tamdgidi.pdf>) (PDF) on 29 October 2013.
224. Walzer, Michael (Winter 2015) "Islamism and the Left" (<http://www.dissentmagazine.org/article/islamism-and-the-left>) Dissent
225. "Writers issue cartoon row warning" (<http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/europe/4763520.stm>). BBC News. 1 March 2006. Retrieved 19 February 2014.
226. Rushdie, Salman et al. (1 March 2006). "Writers' statement on cartoons" (<http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/europe/4764730.stm>), BBC News. Retrieved 18 February 2014. "We refuse to renounce our critical spirit out of fear of being accused of "Islamophobia", a wretched concept that confuses criticism of Islam as a religion and stigmatisation of those who believe in it."
227. Benn, Piers (31 May 2007). "On Islamophobia-phobia" (<http://rationalist.org.uk/524>). rationalist.org.uk. (originally published in New Humanist in 2002). Retrieved 18 February 2014.
228. Kimball, Roger. "After the suicide of the West" (<https://web.archive.org/web/20060103053941/http://www.newcriterion.com/archives/24/01/after-the-suicide/>). Archived from the original on 3 January 2006. Retrieved 2 June 2007., January 2006.
229. Pascal Bruckner: The invention of Islamophobia (<http://www.signandsight.com/features/2123.html>), signandsight.com, 3 January 2011, retrieved 29 September 2012; originally published in French in Libération: L'invention de l'«islamophobie» (<http://www.liberation.fr/societe/01012303767-l-invention-de-l-islamophobie>), 23 November 2010
230. Sam Harris, "Lifting the Veil of 'Islamophobia'" (<http://www.samharris.org/blog/item/lifting-the-veil-of-islamophobia#sthash.bM4Un8kE.H21DmKxR.dpuf>) A Conversation with Ayaan Hirsi Ali", 8 May 2014.
231. Harris, Sam (13 August 2010). "What Obama Got Wrong About the Mosque" (<http://www.thedailybeast.com/blogs-and-stories/2010-08-13/ground-zero-mosque/3/>). The Daily Beast.
232. Michael Walzer (Winter 2015). "Islamism and the Left" (<https://www.dissentmagazine.org/article/islamism-and-the-left>). Dissent (American magazine). Retrieved 2 November 2015.

233. Goldberg, Jeffrey (16 January 2015). "French Prime Minister: I Refuse to Use This Term Islamophobia" (<https://www.theatlantic.com/international/archive/2015/01/french-prime-minister-manuel-valls-on-islamophobia/384592/>). The Atlantic. Retrieved 17 February 2015.
234. Nawaz, Maajid. Radical. W.H. Allen, London: 2012: p. 109
235. Ed Husain (7 July 2008). "Stop pandering to the Islamist extremists" (<https://www.standard.co.uk/news/stop-pandering-to-the-islamist-extremists-6912982.html>). London Evening Standard. London. Retrieved 24 October 2013.
236. Rushdie, Salman (2012). Joseph Anton: A Memoir (<http://www.carvaka4india.com/2012/10/joseph-anton-salman-rushdie-and.html>), pp. 344–46, Jonathan Cape. Quoted at cārvāka4india.com. Retrieved 18 February 2014.
237. Salon: "We need a progressive debate on Islam: This is the right way to counter Donald Trump, and be honest about extremism Freedom of speech, secularism and equal rights must guide the way we discuss all religions – and take on bigots" by Jeffrey Tayler (http://www.salon.com/2015/12/27/we_need_a_progressive_debate_on_islam_this_is_the_right_way_to_counter_donald_trump_and_be_honest_about_extremism/) 27 December 2015
238. Sayyid (2014) 'A measure of Islamophobia' Islamophobia Studies Journal, Vol 2. No. 1, pp. 10-25.
239. Warren J. Blumenfeld (5 December 2012). "The Associated Press and Terms Like 'Homophobia'" (http://www.huffingtonpost.com/warren-j-blumenfeld/the-associated-press-and-terms-like-homophobia_b_2235169.html). Huffington Post. Retrieved 6 June 2013.
240. Dylan Byers (26 December 2012). "AP Nixes 'homophobia', 'ethnic cleansing'" (<http://www.politico.com/blogs/media/2012/11/ap-nixes-homophobia-ethnic-cleansing-150315.html>). Politico. Retrieved 5 June 2013.
241. "CIK Toolkit Launch – European Parliament, Brussels" (<https://cik.leeds.ac.uk/events/cik-toolkit-launch-european-parliament-brussels/>). University of Leeds. 26 September 2018. Retrieved 1 March 2019.
242. "Counter-Islamophobia Kit" (<http://www.equineteurope.org/Counter-Islamophobia-Kit>). Equinet European Network of Equality Bodies. 4 October 2019. Retrieved 1 March 2019.
243. Law, Ian; Amina, Easat-Daas; Sayyid, S. (September 2018). "Counter-Islamophobia kit: briefing paper and toolkit of counter-narratives to Islamophobia" (<https://cik.leeds.ac.uk/wp-content/uploads/sites/36/2018/09/2018.09.17-Job-44240.01-CIK-Final-Booklet.pdf>) (PDF). CIK Consortium (University of Leeds). Retrieved 1 March 2019.
244. Amina, Easat-Daas (21 February 2019). "How to tackle Islamophobia – the best strategies from around Europe" (<https://theconversation.com/how-to-tackle-islamophobia-the-best-strategies-from-around-europe-106092>). The Conversation. Retrieved 1 March 2019.

Bibliography

- Poole, E. (2003). "Islamophobia". In Cashmore, Ellis (ed.). Encyclopedia of Race and Ethnic Studies. Routledge. pp. 215–19. ISBN 978-0-415-44714-0.
- Benn, Tansin; Jawad, H. A. (2003). Muslim Women in the United Kingdom and Beyond: Experiences and Images (<https://books.google.es/books?id=d2sFAQAIAAJ>). Brill Publishers. p. 178. ISBN 978-90-04-12581-0.
- Egorova, Y.; Parfitt, T. (2003). Jews, Muslims, and Mass Media: Mediating the 'Other'. London: Routledge Curzon. ISBN 978-0-415-31839-6.
- Haddad, Yvonne Yazbeck (2002). Muslims in the West: From Sojourners to Citizens (<https://books.google.es/books?id=qdRx7qLF8KIC&printsec=frontcover>). Oxford: Oxford University Press. p. 336. ISBN 978-0-19-514805-3.
- Williams, Charlotte; Soydan, Haluk; Johnson, Mark (1998). Social Work and Minorities: European Perspectives (<https://books.google.es/books?id=vtpwvCFGNOQC>). London, New York: Routledge. p. 273. ISBN 978-0-415-16962-2.
- Miles, Robert; Brown, Malcolm (2003). Racism (<https://books.google.es/books?id=Q5xNQr0uiXUC&printsec=frontcover>). London, New York: Psychology Press. p. 197. ISBN 9780415296779.

Further reading

- Allen, Chris (2011). Islamophobia. Ashgate Publishing Company.
- Abbas, Tahir (2005). Muslim Britain: Communities Under Pressure. Zed. ISBN 978-1-84277-449-6.
- van Driel, B. (2004). Confronting Islamophobia In Educational Practice. Trentham Books. ISBN 978-1-85856-340-4.
- "Fear, Inc.: The Roots of the Islamophobia Network in America (<https://www.americanprogress.org/issues/religion/report/2011/08/26/10165/fear-inc/>)," Wajahat Ali, Eli Clifton, Matthew Duss, Lee Fang, Scott Keyes, and Faiz Shakir, accessed 24 February 2015.
- "Fear, Inc. 2.0: The Islamophobia Network's Efforts to Manufacture Hate in America (<https://www.americanprogress.org/issues/religion/report/2015/02/11/106394/fear-inc-2-0/>)," Matthew Duss, Yasmine Taeb, Ken Gude, and Ken Sofer, accessed 24 February 2015.
- Gottschalk, P.; Greenberg, G. (2007). Islamophobia: Making Muslims the Enemy. Lanham: Rowman & Littlefield publishers. ISBN 978-0-7425-5286-9.
- Greaves, R. (2004). Islam and the West Post 9/11. Ashgate publishing Ltd. ISBN 978-0-7546-5005-8.
- Kaplan, Jeffrey (2006). "Islamophobia in America?: September 11 and Islamophobic Hate Crime (<https://www.taylorfrancis.com/books/e/9781317369882/chapters/10.4324%2F9781315671352-19>)", Terrorism and Political Violence (Routledge), 18:1, 1–33.
- Kincheloe, Joe L. and Shirley R. Steinberg (2004). The Miseducation of the West: How the Schools and Media Distort Our Understanding of Islam. Westport, Connecticut: Praeger Press. (Arabic Edition, 2005).
- Kincheloe, Joe L. and Shirley R. Steinberg (2010). Teaching Against Islamophobia. New York: Peter Lang.
- Konrad, Felix (2011). From the "Turkish Menace" to Exoticism and Orientalism: Islam as Antithesis of Europe (1453–1914)? (<http://nbn-resolving.de/urn:nbn:de:0159-2011020147>), European History Online, Mainz: Institute of European History. Retrieved: 22 June 2011.
- Kundnani, Arun. (2014) The Muslims Are Coming! Islamophobia, Extremism, and the Domestic War on Terror (<https://books.google.com/books?id=JsNNBAAQBAJ&printsec=frontcover#v=onepage&q&f=false>) (Verso; 2014) 327 pages

- Pynting, Scott; Mason, Victoria (2007). "The Resistible Rise of Islamophobia: Anti-Muslim Racism in the UK and Australia before 11 September 2001". Journal of Sociology (<http://www.islamiccouncilwa.com.au/wp-content/uploads/2014/05/poynting2007a-2.pdf>) (PDF). The Australian Sociological Association. 43 (1): 61–86. doi:10.1177/1440783307073935 (<https://doi.org/10.1177%2F1440783307073935>).
- Quraishi, M. (2005). Muslims and Crime: A Comparative Study. Ashgate Publishing. ISBN 978-0-7546-4233-6.
- Ramadan, T. (2004). Western Muslims and the Future of Islam. Oxford: Oxford University Press. ISBN 978-0-19-517111-2.
- Richardson, John E. (2004). (Mis)representing Islam: the racism and rhetoric of British broadsheet newspapers (<https://books.google.com/?id=WanqiF2XULsC&printsec=frontcover#v=onepage&q=>). John Benjamins Publishing Company. ISBN 978-90-272-2699-0.
- Sheehi, Stephen (2011). Islamophobia: The Ideological Campaign Against Muslims. Clarity Press.
- Shryock, Andrew, ed. (2010). Islamophobia/Islamophilia: Beyond the Politics of Enemy and Friend. Indiana University Press. p. 250. Essays on Islamophobia past and present; topics include the "neo-Orientalism" of three Muslim commentators today: Ayaan Hirsi Ali, Reza Aslan, and Irshad Manji.
- Silva, Derek (2017). "The Othering of Muslims: Discourses of Radicalization in the New York Times, 1969-2014" (<https://osf.io/preprints/socarrxiv/xd3g9/download?format=pdf>), Sociological Forum, 32:1, 138–161.
- Tausch, Arno with Christian Bischof, Tomaz Kastrun and Karl Mueller (2007). Against Islamophobia: Muslim Communities, Social-Exclusion and the Lisbon Process in Europe. Hauppauge, N.Y.: Nova Science Publishers. ISBN 978-1-60021-535-3.
- Tausch, Arno with Christian Bischof, and Karl Mueller (2008). Muslim Calvinism: Internal Security and the Lisbon Process in Europe. Purdue University Press. ISBN 978-905170995-7.
- Tausch, Arno (2007). Against Islamophobia: Quantitative Analyses of Global Terrorism, World Political Cycles and Center Periphery Structures. Hauppauge, N.Y.: Nova Science Publishers. ISBN 978-1-60021-536-0.
- Itaoui, Rhonda (2016). "The Geography of Islamophobia in Sydney: mapping the spatial imaginaries of young Muslims", in Australian Geographer. Vol 47:3, 261–79.

External links

- Islamophobia Studies Journal (<http://crg.berkeley.edu/content/islamophobia/islamophobia-studies-journal>) – Islamophobia Research & Documentation Project, UC Berkeley
- Reports – European Islamophobia (<http://www.islamophobiaeurope.com/reports/2015-reports/>) – European Islamophobia Reports EIR
- Islamophobia Today newspaper (<http://www.islamophobiatoday.com/>) – an Islamophobia news clearing house
- Sammy Aziz Rahmatti, Understanding and Countering Islamophobia (https://www.academia.edu/24419416/UNDERSTANDING_and_COUNTERING_ISLAMOPHOBIA)

Retrieved from "<https://en.wikipedia.org/w/index.php?title=Islamophobia&oldid=903667513>"

This page was last edited on 27 June 2019, at 04:47 (UTC).

Text is available under the Creative Commons Attribution-ShareAlike License; additional terms may apply. By using this site, you agree to the Terms of Use and Privacy Policy. Wikipedia® is a registered trademark of the Wikimedia Foundation, Inc., a non-profit organization.